President Acts to End Deadlock in Rail Dispute

Appoints Board For Arbitration of Controversy on Pay for Overtime

Suggestion by WLB

Group Acted Before

By Ben W. Gilbert

President Roosevelt yesterday moved to break the deadlocked nonoperating railroad wage dispute involving 1,100,000 workers by establishing a new emergency board to arbitrate their demands for overtime pay.

The new board was identical in make-up with the three-man board headed by Judge Elwyn R. Shaw of the Supreme Court of Illinois which approved a 4 to 10-cent sliding scale general wage adjustment for the nonops which was first rejected and later accepted by the unions.

Only technical difficulties appeared to be blocking settlement of the other railroad wage dispute—that involving the three operating brotherhoods representing 150,000 workers.

Chiefs Meeting Today

General chairmen of the operating unions and chiefs of the 15 nonoperating unions are scheduled to meet today in separate conferences to decide their next moves in the tangle which resulted in seizure and operation of the railroads by the War Department.

Developments indicated that the railroad wage controversy was headed toward settlement, although union officials declined to comment on prospects.

The action of the President in creating the new emergency board apparently left it up to the board to decide whether to consider the overtime question in the light of their sliding scale award, or independently of it.

The "nonops," in calling off a strike scheduled for 6 a. m. December 30, specified that they were prepared to submit the overtime question to arbitration by the President, but would not consent to any review of the sliding-scale adjust-

Vandals Slash Tires of 40 Cars; OPA Relief Vague

Police were searching yesterday for the person or persons who slashed the tires of 40 cars, some beyond repair, parked in the vicinity of Connecticut ave. and L st. nw., late Tuesday night.

The tires were cut by razors or ice picks, police said, and termed the vandalism "apparently the work of a maniac."

The number of car owners protected by insurance could not be determined yesterday, since few had contacted the AAA. Those covered by insurance, officials explained, will be refunded the price of their tires, but the OPA declined to comment on possibility of new tire purchases. The District OPA pointed out that there is no rule or regulation covering the damage of rationed property, and apparently none of the tire-cutting victims have approached the office.

3 Fliers Die As Army Plane Crashes Here

A little tangled pile of charred wreckage lay in a vacant lot at 11th st. and Alabama ave. se. in the drizzling rain yesterday morning—all that was left of an Army transport plane from Bolling Field in which three men burned to death.

The plane crashed at 7:50 a. m. on a routine flight.

A few blocks away the wife and three young sons of Lieut. Col. Ralph W. Hale, 29, of 2980 2d st. se., to whom he had said goodby less than an hour before, were notified during the morning that he had died instantly when the transport nosed between houses to hit the earth and burst into flames.

On Special Mission

The two other men killed were Capt. Walter R. Johnson of Chicago and Capt. Robert L. Garrard of Gibsonia, Pa. They and Colonel Hale, who had been an employe of the Interior Department before he was commissioned in the Army four years ago, arrived at Bolling Field on Tuesday on a special mission and were flying to the Richmond (Va.) Army Air Base.

It was little short of a miracle that their plane, crashing in a neighborhood of homes, did not smash into one of the houses nearby.

Soldiers on Guard

Within minutes after the accident, soldiers on guard duty were uneasily standing at the corners of the lot to keep the curious away. Several policemen were there to help, but the passersby were few and no great crowd gathered. Army officers were at the scene and there was an Army medical truck with a physician to dress the wound of a civilian slightly injured by a bit of flying metal.

It was not an impressive scene at all. A half block away you would scarcely have known there had been a crash in which three soldiers died—soldiers prepared to give their lives here or in the flak-raked skies abroad.

Half a block away you would have known there was a war on—but for very different reasons.

As this reporter went down the street he passed two women evidently starting out to do their daily marketing. One was talking, in tones loud enough to be overheard, about using up all her ration points and about shortages of butter and other foods.

Another half block along the way was a man waiting for a taxi—and very upset about the difficulty of

Officer Revealed Still Missing In Leary Sinking

By Edward Mitchell

For a few joyous moments last night Miss Ruth Benner Hall, daughter of the director of the Bureau of Engraving and Mrs. Alvin W. Hall, thought Lieut. (j. g.) A. B. Hansen, USN, the man she was to have married this week, had been saved after the sinking of the destroyer Leary on Christmas Eve.

But the joy that came after 24 hours of almost hopeless anxiety faded into even greater despair, for the happiness was created, it appeared last night, by the ghoulish work of a prankster.

Following a published report yesterday that Lieutenant Hansen had been reported as missing in action, and that he was to have married Miss Hall this week, Miss Hall received a telephone call last night from a woman who informed her that the lieutenant had "been saved."

The mysterious caller, after summoning Miss Hall to the telephone at the home, 1319 Kalmia rd. nw., identified herself as a "Mrs. Wainwright, a secretary to a Navy official."

"I have a message for you from the Navy," the caller continued. "Lieut. Hansen has been saved."

With this Miss Hall fainted. The telephone clattered to the floor. Her mother rushed to pick it up, but by that time the wire had gone dead. A check of telegraph firms here, on the theory she might have misunderstood who called, quickly disclosed that no such message had been telephone Miss Hall by them.

The Navy Department last night said they could find no record of a "Mrs. Wainwright," the name used by the caller to the Hall home, as being a secretary to anybody in the Navy Department.

The Navy Department said there was no change in Lieutenant Hansen's status—that he was still listed as missing in action, and that so far as ascertainable, no message from the Navy Department had been sent Miss Hall.

Lieutenant Hansen's mother, Mrs. H. Folmer Hansen, of Fargo, N. Dak., is at the Hall home for the wedding. One room of the home is almost filled with wedding gifts. The mother received a letter, written December 14, from her son. He had anticipated returning to the country this week long enough for the wedding to have taken place in the Chapel of the Naval Academy at Annapolis, from which he graduated last year.

Miss Hall met Lieut. Hansen through her brother, Lieut. (j. g.) Alvin W. Hall, jr., who was his classmate and best friend at the Academy. Lieutenant Hall, just re-

Poles Told Not to Clash With Soviets

But Their Leaders Urge Sovereign Control of Areas Liberated by Reds

London, Jan. 5 (INS).—The Polish government-in-exile announced tonight it has ordered its underground forces to "avoid all conflict with the Red Army entering Poland." But it urged prompt establishment of Polish "sovereign administration" in Poland's former eastern areas as they are liberated from the Germans.

A manifesto issued by Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk's cabinet following an extraordinary session, in effect reiterated the exiled government's claims to Poland's prewar eastern territories which the Soviet Union claims as its own.

The declaration insisted that the Polish government cannot recognize "solutions imposed by force."

Willing to Negotiate

It revealed that, even before the Red Army had crossed Poland's prewar border, the Polish government had offered to negotiate an agreement with Russia and is still willing to do so.

The announcement appeared to have set at rest rumors that the patriotic underground units in Poland would have the unspoken, tacit approval of the Polish government in London should they forcefully resist Russian troops, turning aside from their long struggle against the Germans.

The Polish government-in-exile, however, made it clear that its underground adherents would not be ordered to join hands with the Russians in battling the Germans unless a Polish-Soviet accord is concluded. It was made equally clear that such an agreement would be accepted by the Polish government only if the USSR agrees to return to Poland the eastern Polish areas incorporated into the Soviet Union in 1940 following a frontier pact with Germany.

The Polish statement declared that the Red Army's surge across the 1939 boundary "fills the Polish nation with the hope that its hour of liberation is drawing near."

"The Polish nation," the declaration said, "is entitled to expect full justice and redress as soon as it is set free from enemy occupation. The first condition of such justice is the earliest re-establishment of Polish sovereign administration in the liberated territories of the Republic of Poland and the protection of the lives and property of Polish citizens."

It was considered a foregone conclusion that the Soviet Union will not consent to the creation of "sovereign" Polish administration in the prewar eastern sections of Poland. After the Red Army marched into these areas in September, 1939, plebiscites were held under Soviet auspices and the ter-

Army, Navy Ask Uniform Soldier Vote

Notify State Officials They Cannot Manage 48 Procedures

By Robert C. Albright

The War and Navy Departments, in a joint statement of soldier vote policy, have put State officials on notice that the armed services cannot administer 48 widely different State absentee voting procedures.

The joint statement, urging uniform service voting laws, was sent to the Council of State Governments by Secretaries Stimson and Knox as many State legislatures were convening to speed State soldier vote legislation.

Both Stimson and Knox refused to take sides in the Capitol's raging Federal war ballot controversy. Advocates of a compromise Federal ballot bill none the less hailed the statement as the strongest possible argument against the Senate-passed soldier vote substitute leaving service voting action to the States.

Senator Scott W. Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, who on Monday will introduce the latest revision of the compromise Federal ballot measure, predicted the Senate will reverse itself when it finds that conflicting State procedures will deny a voting opportunity to most servicemen.

Eight Main Difficulties

Representative George H. Bender (Republican), of Ohio, commended Governors for calling special sessions to liberalize absentee balloting procedures but said "despite these good intentions our soldiers are not going to be able to vote unless the Congress provides them with a simple, uniform Federal ballot."

"In the time of war, the services are unable effectively to administer diverse procedures of 48 States as to 11,000,000 servicemen all over the world in primary, special and general elections," said the Knox-Stimson statement.

The War and Navy Secretaries wrote that their policy is to "encourage servicemen to vote, so far as practicable and compatible with military operation," but pointed out: "Nothing must interfere with the services' primary obligation to wage victorious war."

The service chiefs enumerated eight provisions of many existing State laws that "cannot be effectively administered by the Army and Navy, having regard to their primary function."

Cannot Furnish Data

They said the armed services could not furnish to State officials (1) names, serial numbers and military addresses of servicemen voters or (2) data on military or naval establishments at which they are located.

Also, they would be unable (1) to appoint agents at these estab-

25 Bombers, 12 Fighters Lost

U.S. Planes Bomb Kiel, Down 95 Nazi Craft

London (Thursday), Jan 6 (AP).—U. S. heavy bombers and escorting fighters shot down 95 German planes yesterday as they ranged across a record 800-mile front to strike the Kiel shipyards, airfields at Bordeaux and Tours in France, and industrial targets in western Germany.

Duesseldorf was reported by a Berlin radio broadcast to have been among the bombers' objectives.

It was the biggest day for U. S. Army Air Force gunners since the December 11 raid on Emden, when 138 Nazi fighters were bagged. The widespread operation cost the attacking force 25 heavy bombers and 12 escorting fighters.

To reach their targets the bombers knifed through a strong defense which included rocket planes and ME-110s towing what appeared to be new-type antiaircraft bombs.

Gunners on the Flying Fortresses and Liberators accounted for 62 of the German planes downed, while Thunderbolt and Lightning pilots got 33 in the far-ranging operation which in scope became one of the great daylight assaults of the war.

Claiming that German losses during the day's aerial battles were "remarkably light," the German news agency DNB in a broadcast dispatch said "more than 50 British-American planes, of which at least four-fifths were four-engined bombers, were destroyed—23 of them over France."

The great Allied preinvasion aerial offensive apparently kept rolling around the clock as a procession of RAF planes was heard flying high over the Dover Strait toward the French coast.

English coastal watchers heard the procession begin shortly after dusk. Continental radios from Vichy to Budapest left the air last night, often a sign of night bombing activities.

Never before in a major operation has the United States Eighth Air Force been able to attack targets so far apart as Kiel and Bordeaux or been able to execute so

Marines Repel Attack, Gain On New Britain

Push From Airfield On Cape Toward Borgen Bay Base

MacArthur's Headquarters, New Guinea (Thursday), Jan. 6 (INS).—Tank-paced American Marines, supported by furious artillery and air bombardment, pushed through the New Britain jungles from the captured Cape Gloucester airdrome today in a new drive aimed at the Jap base at Borgen Bay, 6 miles to the southeast.

Repulsing another determined Jap counterattack, the two Marine columns which landed on both sides of the cape joined forces and extended the airdrome salient against the stiffest enemy resistance yet encountered in the Gloucester area.

Allied bombers, meanwhile, were revealed to have damaged a Japanese cruiser and an escort vessel and destroyed two enemy merchantmen in widespread air attacks.

At least 17 and probably 22 Jap planes—including three bombers—were smashed attempting to intercept the air blows. Four Allied planes were lost.

The enemy cruiser received a direct bomb hit when a Solomons-based Allied air patrol spotted the warship off New Hanover island, near New Ireland. Twin-motored medium bombers, meanwhile, attacked the big Kavieng base on New Ireland, blasting harbor installations and shipping despite interception by 19 Zeros.

Medium and heavy bombers roared deep into Jap-held territory to pound the big port at Koepang, on Timor, scoring hits on a Jap escort vessel and two merchantmen of 2000 and 4000 tons. The two cargo ships exploded and burst into flames, said the communique.

Other air assaults were hurled against Jap positions in the Buka and Buin-Faisi areas of Bougainville, Madang and Alexishafen on New Guinea, and the huge Jap keypoint base at Rabaul, on New Britain's northeast tip.

To the east, American Sixth Army troops which landed at Saidor, on the New Guinea coast 115 miles north of Finschhafen, stabbed inland and southward along the coast.

At Arawe, across the western tip of New Britain from Cape Gloucester, other Sixth Army troops penetrated into the Jap-held jungles surrounding the American beachhead and clashed sharply with enemy forces.

Nazis Reinforced

By Wes Gallagher

Algiers, Jan. 5 (AP).—German engineers are rushing to completion an Italian "Siegfried Line" several miles deep and as powerful as similar Nazi fortifications in western Europe, German prisoners reported today as headquarters disclosed that Lieut. Gen. Sir Oliver Leese, a tank expert, had taken over command of the British Eighth Army in its drive up Italy's Adriatic coast.

Intent on keeping the Allies from Rome as long as possible, the Nazis were said to be installing their formidable new defense system only a few miles from the present battle line, with its strongest features located in the neighborhood of Cassino, opposite the Fifth Army and inland from Pescara, Adriatic seaport which Canadian forces are nearing.

"Point 59" Captured

The desperate resistance in Italy in recent weeks possibly was dictated by the necessity of holding until the new line could be completed. The Nazis also were reported to be reinforcing their troops at the front with crack mountain regiments. An Allied officer said the enemy appeared to be preparing for a long war of attrition up the Italian leg.

Canadian troops celebrated announcement of the appointment of General Leese by storming and capturing "Point 59," a strongly-defended hill about 3 miles from Ortona, and overlooking the coastal highway to Pescara. The advance was the first of importance for the Canadians since a snow and wind storm hit the Adriatic sector last week.

Gen. Leese's Record

The new commander of Britain's best known army is a 49-year-old 6-footer who commanded a corps of the Eighth Army through the North African and Sicilian campaigns, and is second in popularity in that organization only to Gen.

Reds Capture Berdichev, Rail Bulwark Of Foe's Line

Drives Threaten To Cut Off Enemy In Dnieper Bend And the Crimea

Moscow, (Thursday) Jan. 6.—Soviet forces captured the great rail hub of Berdichev yesterday and overran more than 60 other localities in the Ukraine in a drive that gained 30 miles in one day, and intensified a threat to trap 500,000 to 750,000 enemy troops in the Dnieper Bend and perhaps 250,000 more in the Crimea.

Some 500 miles to the north, Gen. Ivan C. Bagramian's first Baltic army, smashing forward above Nevel in a push toward Latvia, overran more than 90 populated points, including 13 large towns and a heavily fortified German strong point.

The capture of ancient Berdichev, former headquarters of German Field Marshal Fritz von Mannerstein lying 85 miles northeast of Rumania's prewar Bessarabian frontier, crowned a violent five-day battle.

Advance in Old Poland

This latest victory of Gen. Nikolai F. Vatutin's first Ukrainian army, the upper wing of which was reported approaching Sarny nearly 40 miles inside the old Polish border, was announced by Marshal Joseph Stalin in a special order of the day. Berdichev had a normal population of more than 52,000 and is 90 miles southwest of Kiev and 25 miles below Zhitomir.

"The enemy's losses on the approaches to the city and in the street fighting were heavy," said the midnight communique. "Large quantities of booty and a considerable number of prisoners were captured."

Drive to Close Trap

Another of Vatutin's radiating columns struck to the southeast in a drive to close a trap on the Germans within the Dnieper bend, and captured more than 60 communities including the district center of Taraschcha. Occupation of the latter town represented a one-day advance of 30 miles southeast from the Belaya Tserkov junction, captured Tuesday.

In the lightning surge down from Belaya Tserkov alone, the war bulletin stated, more than 4000 German officers and men were killed, "many" Nazi tanks and self-propelled guns were disabled and great stocks of war materiel, abandoned by the retreating Nazis, were seized.

That the Germans may have launched a desperate effort to extricate some 250,000 Nazi and Rumanian troops from the Crimea and

Spanish Soldiers Still Fighting, Russians Report

New York, Jan. 5 (AP).—Spanish soldiers are fighting side by side with the Germans on the Volkhov front in northern Russia despite assertions by Gen. Francisco Franco's government that all Spaniards have been called home, a broadcast Russian communique asserted today.

The communique quoted a captured Spanish soldier, Jesus Sanchez, as authority for the assertion.

Sanchez, taken prisoner on the Volkhov front late in December, told interrogators, according to the communique, that the Spanish "Blue Division," and the "250th Division," reportedly ordered back to Spain, had been reformed into a so-called "Spanish Legion" which arrived on the Soviet German front in September and October, 1943. Several prisoners from this force already have been captured, the Russians said.

D. C. Pilot Wins Navy Cross; Blasted 24 Jap Planes in Raid

(By a Marine Corps combat correspondent.)

Somewhere in the South Pacific (Delayed)—For destroying 24 enemy planes in a one-man strafing attack on the biggest Japanese air field in the Solomons, Marine Second Lieut. Alvin J. Jensen, 23, son of Mrs. C. Jensen, 1236 11th st. nw., Washington, has been awarded the Navy Cross. Simultaneously, he also has been awarded the Air Medal for previous aerial combat.

His solo assault against the Japanese field took place on August 26 when he was separated from his wing men and came out of a vicious tropical storm over Kahili Field on Bougainville Island. One of a flight of Marine fighter pilots ordered to strafe Kahili Field, he was the only flier who arrived over the field in position to complete his mission.

As he came out of the storm upside down, he flipped his plane over and circled widely toward the north end of the field.

Jensen swept down the entire length on the mile-long strip, weaving his plane back and forth while his guns sprayed Japanese ground crews and destroyed 12 Mitsubishi bombers, eight Zeros and four dive bombers. At one point his plane was only three feet off the ground.

"It took about 10 seconds," he said, "and the Japs never knew what hit them until I was halfway down the field. By the time I reached the end of their field, the party got rough and I high-tailed it for home low and fast."

Photographs later showed that explosions from the burning planes had strewn debris from one end of the field to the other.

Jensen received the Air Medal for "meritorious achievements" as a marine enlisted pilot before he was commissioned May 21, 1943. This citation read in part:

"Technical Sergeant Jensen was flying with a formation of four fighters which contacted a large group of enemy Zeros. In spite of

U.S. Submarine Pompano Lost With Its Crew of 75 in Pacific

The Navy Department announced last night the loss of the United States submarine Pompano, presumably a victim of Japanese counteraction while attacking enemy supply lines in the Far Pacific.

A communique said that the Pompano, a craft of 1330 tons, "is overdue and must be presumed to be lost," and that the next of kin of the personnel, numbering about 75 officers and men, have been so informed.

Lost with the ship was her skipper, Commander Willis Thomas, whose wife lives at Vallejo, Calif.

The Pompano was the seventeenth American submarine and the 139th United States naval vessel to be lost since the beginning of the war.

Thirteen of these met their end while participating with other ships of the American submarine fleet in a vigorous ocean-wide campaign which has resulted in the destruction of 2,500,000 tons of Japanese merchant shipping.

Nearly 400 Japanese warships and merchant vessels have been sunk by United States submarines, and more than 100 other Japanese ships have been damaged by submarine gunfire and torpedo attacks.

The Pompano itself had been credited by the Navy with sinking one Japanese destroyer, 6900 tons of enemy merchant shipping and a 900-ton enemy patrol vessel.

Commander Thomas received the Navy Cross for extraordinary heroism in taking the Pompano near the Japanese coastline to attack enemy shipping in waters closely patrolled by Japanese war vessels.

AFL Effort to Pit MacArthur Against Marshall Backfires

The American Federation of Labor's official magazine yesterday appeared to have attempted to place Gen. Douglas MacArthur in the public position of challenging the views of Gen. George C. Marshall on wartime labor relations, but the effort backfired, with the federation disclaiming responsibility for the action.

The office of the American Federationist, official monthly publication of the AFL, announced that its January issue, now on the press, was featuring a statement by MacArthur, lauding American labor, along with a picture of the general.

In view of the charges by a "high authority," now attributed to Chief of Staff Marshall, that the railroad and steel labor disputes had prolonged the war, the announcement of the MacArthur statement appeared tantamount to a reply to Marshall.

However, investigation of newspaper files disclosed that the statement was made on April 1, 1942, in reply to pledges of support from AFL President William Green and James Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer.

The statement in question, which was carried by the Associated Press from MacArthur's Southwest Pacific headquarters, was:

"Labor never has failed the Army or the Nation. May God bless you for your splendid patriotism."

Philip Pearl, the AFL's press representative, said that "no one in authority" in the organization had issued any statement or release indicating that MacArthur had made a new or recent statement on the subject of labor. This particular other parts of the lower Ukraine outside the Dnieper loop by sea was indicated. The communique stated that a 3000-ton enemy transport was sunk and another transport damaged in the Black Sea.

40 Miles From Latvia

Bagramian's offensive, already within 40 miles of the Latvian frontier west of Nevel, grew in scope and fury as it flung its main weight north of that city for the time being. Realizing the danger of a Russian breakthrough toward the Baltic coast that might trap an estimated 500,000 to 750,000 Germans on the Leningrad front and isolate Finland, the Germans hurled powerful forces into several fierce counterattacks.

All these counterthrusts were repulsed with severe losses, according to the Soviet communique.

The Germans, earlier, had admitted evacuating the eastern portion of Berdichev, which is on the trunk east-west railway from Kowel in Poland to Kazatin and connects with the Kiev-Vinnitsa railway 45 miles north of Vinnitsa.

The capture gave the Russians use of the lateral railway from Zhitomir to Kazatin in the south, where an important Russian force was rounding toward Rumania.

In the gloomy view of a German spokesman quoted in Stockholm dispatches, the Germans' eastern defense line had been split open by a "very wide penetration of the Red army.

Bug River Defense

Berdichev, already outflanked to the west and south, had been as good as lost to Von Mannstein. His next job is to attempt to hold Vinnitsa on the Bug River line barely 18 miles beyond Vatutin's spearheads and 20 miles short of Zhmerinka, whose fall would cut the Odessa-Lwow-Warsaw trunkline, last Nazi direct supply artery to the lower Ukraine.

As the Russians drove southward, the military question of the moment became, "Has Von Mannstein waited too long?" According to Eddy Gilmore, Associated Press correspondent in Moscow, "The Germans are running the risk of encountering a major military disaster" if the Russians complete an encirclement with their flanking operation from the west, Gilmore wrote.

On the Nazis' left flank the Russians had cut in behind, south of Pliskov in Vinnitsa Province, and on their right they faced the danger of a Red army surge across the Dnieper any place between Nikopol and the river mouth at Kherson.

Meanwhile, Berlin announced an important new Soviet drive in the area southwest of Krichev in White Russia. It said the attack began Tuesday with violent artillery preparation, after which several Red Army divisions and a large number of tanks smashed in on a comparatively narrow front. Heavy fighting raged all day and continued Wednesday, Berlin radio said.

Although the area was not identified further, it was between the Nevel-Vitebsk fighting in the north and the northern Ukraine. The Russians, as is customary when a new operation begins, made no mention of the area.

The Red army's fast-growing offensive in northwest Russia, while not as spectacular as the Ukrainian campaign, took on the shape of a major-scale operation as Soviet troops began pushing down the Velikie Luki-Riga Railway.

A dispatch from Nevel to the Soviet Army newspaper Red Star said that the Russians were advancing with considerable speed down this railway after clearing the Nevel-Velikie Luki line. The dispatch said that there was hard fighting in the lake and swamp country, but gave assurance that the offensive was developing successfully, threatening to cut off the Germans on the front from Estonia to Leningrad.

In a statement coinciding with the entrance of Soviet troops into old Poland, the Soviet Embassy declared yesterday that in 1939 when Germany and Russia divided Poland the Red Army liberated "Western Byleorussia (White Russia) and the Western Ukraine from the yoke of Polish usurpers."

Alluding to plebiscites which Moscow announced were held soon after the partition, the embassy bulletin said "the people of western Byelorussia themselves decided the question of the form their state was to take."

lishments in connection with servicemen's voting, (2) designate a particular day or period in which the men would mark their State ballots, (3) provide special procedures other than secret marking of ballots, (4) furnish to the services particular State instructions for posting at armed service locations or (5) furnish to the services for distribution to servicemen by States, other than person-to-person mail, any literature, instructions, official forms or application for ballots, or State absentee ballots.

To aid "effective cooperation" by the armed services in State absentee voting procedures, Stimson and Knox urged uniform legislation to make absentee ballots available to overseas servicemen at least 45 days before the election.

Twenty-seven of the States now allow only 30 days or less for absentee voting. Servicemen in the United States, the policy statement said, would require a 30-day minimum. For the men overseas, it said even 45 days may be insufficient "because air carriage is not always practicable or compatible with military operations.

'Siegfried Line' Built in Italy

Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, whom he succeeds. Montgomery will direct British ground troops in the invasion of western Europe.

Leese, tall and straight with gray, thinning hair and good-humored weatherbeaten face, distinguished himself during the last war as a member of the Coldstream Guards. He was seriously wounded and awarded the DSO.

Indian troops fighting a few miles inland from the Adriatic were reported to have advanced several hundred yards under enemy machine-gun fire and seized a spur of a mountain ridge southwest of San Tommaso.

Fifth Army Infantry of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark advanced more than a mile west of Venafro to capture a 2300-foot height in the Samucro Ridge about two miles northwest of the village of San Vittore. An Allied officer said the Fifth Army now held all heights overlooking San Vittore, which is six miles from Cassino, on the main island highway to Rome.

While weather restricted air activity, Allied bombers ranged into Bulgaria and Yugoslavia. Other Allied planes strafed Nazi shipping off the west coast of Italy and attacked transport in the battle zone. Two enemy craft were destroyed during the day. Every Allied plane returned.

Headquarters disclosed that American, British and French troops are undergoing training throughout French North Africa for coming assaults across the Mediterranean against the Germans.

(This could indicate that landings are planned on the French Mediterranean coast to coincide with the well-heralded invasion from England.)

North Africa was described as "one vast training center" for invasion forces. The American and British troops are newly arrived in this theater.

Britain Facing 50% Liquor Cut

London, Jan. 5 (AP).—Many pubs started rationing customers to one "double" a visit today, after distillers warned that a 50 per cent cut was likely soon in Britain's liquor supply.

Describing the whisky situation as "acute," one distiller said exports to North and South America also would be cut in half. No more liquor is being distilled, and existing stocks are disappearing rapidly, he said.

the numerical superiority of the enemy, his flight unhesitatingly attacked with such skill and precision that five enemy planes were sent crashing into the sea, two of which he personally accounted for."

Nearing the end of his third combat tour, Lieutenant Jensen is now credited with six enemy planes downed in combat.

Jensen Expected Home in Few Days

Lieut. Alvin J. Jensen, 23, of 1236 11th st. nw., the one-man blitz, is expected home in the next few days for his first mainland furlough in more than 16 months.

Mrs. Catherine Jensen, his mother, who has been eagerly awaiting his return, was surprised yesterday at the immediate fame of her boy. She is resident manager of the Plymouth apartments, at the 11th st. address.

Jensen attended Washington and Lee High School Arlington, Va., and was graduated from Woodrow Wilson High School in the District, after the family moved here from Clemson, S. C., where the flier was born, Mrs. Jensen said. Following high school, Jensen worked in the Government Printing Office. He enlisted in the Marine Corps Reserve in 1940 and was called to active duty when war broke out. He was stationed at Quantico, Va., for more than a year and then transferred to Pensacola, Fla., Air Training Station. He received his wings in Miami on the completion of his training, and was ordered overseas in September, 1942.

Pag Island Retaken, Tito's Army Claims

War Sidelights

Nazi-Fighting Danish Poet Found Slain

Stockholm, Jan. 5 (AP).—Kaj Munk, famed Danish poet and pastor, who openly fought the Nazis, has been found slain in a wood near the German military headquarters at Silkeborg, Denmark, dispatches from Copenhagen disclosed today, the victim of what the Free Danish Press Service terms a Nazi-inspired political assassination.

The slaying of Munk, 45, who had written many anti-Nazi books, articles and plays, stirred up among Danes in indignation unmatched since the mass arrest of Jews early last October.

The pastor-poet's body was found Tuesday, dispatches said, after four men believed to have been Gestapo agents went to Munk's home at nearby Vedersoe and drove away with him.

Plants Rebuilt, Nazis Say

Stockholm, Jan. 5 (AP).—The German press said today that "a great part" of the factories bombed out in western Germany had been rebuilt in Poland, and now were in production.

The German-controlled Scandinavian telegraph bureau said the press had published pictures showing plants built in Poland by the Todt organization.

The blow at the Kiel shipyards was the third one in three weeks.

It was the second attack in two days on Kiel, German Baltic Sea port. That city's shipyard, and railway targets at Muenster, also in northwest Germany, were struck by U. S. heavy bombers Tuesday. Counting American and British fighter escorts the fleet in that attack consisted of some 1500 planes.

Between the two Kiel stabs, RAF Mosquito bombers hit smoldering Berlin in a night attack. British and Allied planes pounded targets in northern France and along the French "invasion coast" in daylight.

The Britain-based U. S. Flying Fortresses and Liberators were escorted by American fighters on all their missions by day except the foray at Bordeaux, which involved round-trip flight of almost 1000 miles. In the Bordeaux operation [illegible] were given withdrawal support by American and RAF fighters.

Crews returning from Kiel said the target was reached in clear weather, and hit squarely. Some gunners compared the fighter resistance over Kiel to the Schweinfurt raid, when 60 Fortresses were lost.

One group of Fortress fliers reported encountering not only the usual types of German fighter planes but concentrations of rocket planes and twin-engined Messerschmitts towing what appeared to be 100-pound bombs on 40 or 50 feet of wire.

This was the first time such defensive devices have been seen, and the bomber crewmen were unable to explain how the "tag-along" bombs were detonated. One was seen to explode behind a Fortress.

Other crewmen said that for the first time in a long while they saw some of their escorting P-38 Lightnings outnumbered by Nazi fighters.

As British-American air power continued to play a grim overture to the opening of a western European front, bombs again burst on German defensive positions in northern France.

Winging across the channel during the day hundreds of RAF and Allied medium bombers hit military objectives in an area which has been under almost constant attack for the last nine days. Heavy explosions from points between Boulogne and Calais were heard on this side of the channel.

RAF fighter-bombers attacked targets in the same general area later without loss and RAF and Dominion fighters scoured a larger area without incident—the Germans apparently being too busy with the heavy raiders.

Partisans Report 400 Nazis Slain, Other Successes

London, Jan. 5 (AP).—The Partisan army of Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) asserted today it had recaptured the 35-mile-long island of Pag in the northeastern Adriatic and scored fresh successes elsewhere, while Allied bombers from Italy and North Africa hit targets throughout the Balkans.

The Partisan communique countered reports issued from King Peter's headquarters that Tito's Armies of Liberation were badly mauled and on the verge of disaster.

Savage fighting was reported on a dozen or more sectors and the communique said the Partisans were battering the Nazis into retreat in the coastal region southeast of the Italian port of Fiume, crushing a German offensive in eastern Bosnia and seizing the initiative in western Bosnia.

Sanguinary street fighting continued in the five-day battle for Banja Luka, Croatian headquarters of the Second German Tank Army.

Increasing air support was afforded Tito's warriors by the Allies. United States Flying Fortresses bombed railway yards at Dupnitsa, 50 miles south of the Bulgarian capital of Sofia, and Mitchell bombers struck a railway station and yards at Doboj, north of Sarajevo, in Yugoslavia. Barracks and troop concentrations were bombed at Travnik.

Vlasenica, 30 miles northeast of Sarajevo, was captured along with a huge store of war gear, the Partisan communique said. Some 300 Germans were reported killed in Slavonia and Slovenia near Dvor, and another 100 were slain at besieged Novo Mesto.

Cairo, Jan. 4 (delayed) (AP).—An inside story brought here today from Yugoslavia is that the Partisans await liberation through a massive second front elsewhere rather than through immediate Allied landings in their guerilla bailwick.

A South African officer who escaped from a German prison camp 11 months after he was captured at Tobruk on June 21, 1942, talked with many Yugoslavs and said their main regret is that the Allies did not make landings across the Adriatic high up the coast at a time when the Partisans were in command and the Germans were caught flatfooted.

"Now the Yugoslavs realize the difficulties of landing on their own shores overshadowed by impassable mountains," the major said. In and behind the mountains are an estimated 14 to 15 German divisions.

Chinese Armies Ready to Strike When Allies Do

Chungking, Jan. 5 (AP).—China's armies stand ready, even with available equipment, to spring a general counteroffensive this year, but such a campaign would be contingent upon Allied activities in other war theaters, Minister of Information Liang Han-chao said today.

He declared that increaed air power in China would be particularly helpful to a Chinese offensive.

A communique, meanwhile, announced capture of all villages around Owchihkow on the Yangtze River above Tungting Lake, and said the Chinese were pushing on into the suburbs of the city.

Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters said United States Fourteenth Air Force bombers with fighter escorts had pounded the Japanese base at Lampang in Thailand Monday with 10 tons of bombs, and fighter-bombers struck Pingka in western Yunnan Province, starting many fires. All planes returned safely.

D. C. Officer Helps Blast Kiel

Capt. Jack P. Firestone, 22, 2627 Newton st., ne., was revealed as the leading navigator of a combat wing which took part yesterday in the big American fortress raid on the German port of Kiel, and described by him "as Schweinfurt all over again."

FIRESTONE

In the Schweinfurt blow, 60 Fortresses were lost.

"It looked as if the Germans threw all the fighters they had against us," Firestone said in an interview at a U. S. bomber base in Britain, according to the Associated Press.

A resident of Washington since he was 19 months old, Firestone was graduated from McKinley High School in June, 1941. He enlisted in the Air Corps after working in the office of a local ice company for about two months.

He won his wings at Hondo, Tex., in November, 1942, and a month later married Jean Jones of Cleveland, Miss.

His wife is living with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Paul Firestone, at the Newton st. home. Firestone is display manager at Garfinckel's Department Store.

RAF Expects More Attacks By Luftwaffe

London, Jan. 5 (AP).—The Germans' frontline fighter force—most of it concentrated in western Europe—is 1000 planes larger than a year ago, and the Nazis still have enough bombers to give Britain some "nasty smacks," an RAF commentator said today.

This commentator added that the Germans are not attacking Britain in force because of their traditional policy of risking their forces only if there is possibility of substantial gain.

The Germans might attempt a raid in force for political and propaganda reasons, he said, and "we'd be lunatics to assume we are not going to get a nasty smack one of these nights."

The commentator said Allied fighters' qualitative superiority over German bombers probably was just as great as in 1940. He noted that the 1000 increase in German fighters, while it did not sound like a great deal, was "a very remarkable achievement" considering the constant drain on the German air force and blows against its productive capacity.

The increase was achieved by a production drive and a shift in emphasis from an offensive bomber force to the more easily made defensive fighter, he continued.

The actual state of the Luftwaffe is reflected in a plane-conservation program, as shown by refusal to oppose Allied secondary but nonetheless destructive atatcks in order to build up a force against major attacks, and an invasion front.

The commentator said that aside from rocket "gadgets," the Germans had a singularly blank record of technical progress in 1943—that the principal achievement probably was ironing out the many kinks in the long-projected Heinkel 177 four-engined bomber. He added that some new German types may be expected this year.

Soviet Writer Accuses Willkie Of Hypocrisy

Moscow, Jan. 5 (AP).—Wendell Willkie, who was warmly received in Russia during his 1942 round-the-world trip, was attacked as a "political gambler" by a writer in the Communist Party organ Pravda, and was scolded for having discussed the Polish and Baltic questions in a recent newspaper article.

The writer, Dmitry Zaslavsky, accused Willkie of "muddying the waters" in an effort to entice presidential support from persons who do not trust the Soviet Union as well as win sympathy from those who do.

Taking particular offense at Willkie's discussion of the status of Poland and the Baltic states, the article said the Baltic question was the business of the Soviet Union and one in which "Mister Willkie should not interfere."

"As to Finland and Poland, without mentioning the Balkans, the Soviet Union knows how to deal with them and does not need the help of Mr. Willkie," Zaslavsky said.

(Willkie, in an article published in the New York Times magazine section of January 2, said: "Our principal objective must now be to persuade Russia to accept and give the guarantees of a general organization, in which she and we are both members, rather than to seek her own protection by political and military control over adjoining territories.")

Zaslavsky accused Willkie of playing "a very peculiar political game" and "under the pretext of strengthening confidence in the Soviet Union he uses words and phrases with the purpose of creating mistrust."

The Russian said the article was written by "Mr. Wendell Willkie, candidate for Presidency in the coming elections" and said "such a political gambler destroys confidence."

He quoted Willkie as saying that "the majority of our people do not want to use the Russian question in the political game" and wrote in comment: "It would seem that Willkie does not approve of such a political game. He probably wants to gain the confidence of the majority of the American people and could succeed in this by encouraging confidence in the Soviet Union."

Grateful Yanks Give $4000 to RAF Fliers

Cairo, Jan. 5 (AP).—American soldiers aboard a troop ship in a Mediterranean convoy today chipped in $4000 to express their gratitude to RAF fighter pilots who drove off two attacks by enemy planes.

The money will go to the dependents of any casualties among the air crews defending the convoy.

36 Key Air Men Of Brazil Arrive In U.S. for Training

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 5 (AP).—A key group of 36 Brazilian Air Force officers and men arrived in the United States today for tactical training preparatory to going overseas with the first expeditionary force in Brazil's history.

The airmen came aboard a military transport plane and will report to the Army Air Forces' School of Applied Tactics at Orlando, Fla., tomorrow.

Among the arrivals was Capt. O. Pamplona, who in May, 1942, sank the first of 11 enemy submarines destroyed by Brazilian flyers.

The group will be at Orlando for "a few weeks," it was said. Their movements thereafter become a vital military secret. The 36 will form the nucleus of a much larger overseas air force.

Problem of Reconversion Grave, WPB Official Warns

By the Associated Press

The two aspects of reconversion to civilian economy—how to head off mounting pressure for too precipitate action while war goods are still needed, and how to make the change swift and effective when guns are stilled—are absorbing an increasing share of official attention.

The problem's dual phases were taken up separately yesterday, the immediate one in a Chicago speech by William L. Batt, vice chairman of the War Production Board, who predicted that 1944 changeovers will present more complex questions than those of the shift to war production, and the long-range aspect by Representative Tolan (Democrat) of Californie, who offered a comprehensive program for blueprinting and directing the ultimate shift.

Where Labor Will Go

Batt told the Chicago Association of Commerce that great pressures for return to civilian production will be generated by availability of materials in some areas, and of manpower in others, as stockpiling of certain classes of war goods permit cutbacks in their production.

Jobs with a postwar future, he said, will pull labor, and peacetime markets and profits not subject to renegotiation will attract management.

"As I look further ahead and pass the period of Germany's defeat," Batt said, "I am gravely concerned. The pulling and hauling which has characterized too much of our national habit in the years that are past, the pressure of individual groups for their own betterment without regard to the welfare of the country, the narrow little views that so many of us hold, seem wholly inadequate to meet the grave issues we inevitably must face."

War Needs Come First

Despite cutbacks in certain war-goods items, Batt said, war production should level off this year at 10 to 15 per cent above present rates. He named aircraft and components, radio and radar, naval vessels and certain specialized items as demanding increased emphasis.

There can be no reconversion in any industry, the WPB official emphasized, until war needs are fully met. He said a serious handicap to such needed production will result unless equitable plans are set up for orderly handling of such reconversion as can be allowed.

Tolan, chairman of the House Committee on Defense Migration, offered his program as the answer to "perhaps the most serious economic problem the country has ever confronted."

statement by the general, in fact, was published in the Federationist of June, 1942, Pearl added. Pearl, himself, has no connection with the publication.

Editors of the Federationist declined to comment on whether publication of the statement had any connection with the charges attributed to Marshall. The announcement of the illustrated feature, sent as a telegram to newspaper and press association offices, did not mention the date of the MacArthur statement or why it was being used.

No Strikes, Says Atherton

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 5 (AP).—Warren H. Atherton, national commander of the American Legion, telegraphed Gen. George C. Marshall today that the right to strike should be suspended for the duration of the war.

Atherton advised the Army chief of staff that the Legion supports the statement, attributed to General Marshall by some newspapers, that labor troubles in this country have prolonged the war by lending encouragement to Germany.

"We know as you do that if the enemy could cut our supply lines, our armies would be doomed," Atherton's telegram said. "We can not afford to help the enemy by cutting our own supply lines for him by strikes here at home.

"In our opinion the right to strike should be suspended for the duration, and we people fortunate to be safe at home should devote 24 hours a day to support our sons who fight for us at the front. Our Nation must stand behind you in your inspired leadership."

Davis Proposes Public Airing Of Labor Woes

Faced with wage-increase demands from the CIO Steel Workers and other unions which could result in further costly strikes if not granted, William H. Davis, chairman of the War Labor Board, would provide the Nation's organized workers with another opportunity to "put the strike pistol on the table for the duration of the war."

In an interview with The Post yesterday, Davis stated his conviction that present labor troubles should be settled "through the democratic process of public discussion."

Could Become Duel

However, he pointed out that if such discussions fail to convince labor "to put the pistol down," then the Government would have no choice "but to answer with a pistol of its own, making the best shot the winner."

The discussions Davis was proposing would cover the entire national wartime labor policy, including the question of the validity of labor's objections to the present wage control policy as established by presidential executive orders and decisions of Economic Stabilizer Fred M. Vinson and the WLB.

Opening the wage policy of the Nation for discussion would not necessarily mean that a change in the wage policy would be made, Davis emphasized. It might well be found that the present wage policy is the fairest one possible, he said.

The no-strike pledge was formulated in December, 1941, at a White House conference of industrial and labor leaders and resulted in the creation of the WLB on January 12, 1942. It was not indicated whether Davis was considering reviving this conference, or instituting public discussion in some other fashion.

Provided Spotlight

Appointment by President Roosevelt of a special commission made up of five WLB members to study the cost of living index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics had the effect of throwing a public spotlight on the problem. But, observers pointed out that the committee deals with only a part of the problem—how well the index measures the cost of living, but does not deal with another important question—are the yardsticks used by the War Labor Board a fair measure of wartime wages.

It has been suggested in some congressional quarters that the Connally-Smith Antistrike law be amended to extend its criminal penalty provisions to strikes in privately owned plants as well as to Government-held establishments.

Implicit in Davis' suggestion is the belief that another attempt should be made to make the present voluntary system of governing wartime labor relations work before turning to more drastic remedies.

Adoption of Davis' proposal would imply a willingness by War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes and Vinson to permit the wage stabilization program to be reconsidered. To date, none of their public utterances has indicated readiness to alter the line.

Cannot Change Policy

Under existing regulations, the War Labor Board cannot change the wage policy, even if it thinks a change is desirable. The most it can do is offer recommendations to President Roosevelt and Vinson to change existing executive orders and administrative rulings.

Davis sees the wage demands now being pressed as a possible threat to the current program. He thinks that the unions pressing the demands should be asked: "What are you seeking? Do you want an adjustment within the present policy, or do you want the policy changed? Or are you seeking to force the board to violate the policy it is operating under?"

The steelworkers, whose wages already have been measured under the Little Steel formula, are now asking a 17-cents-an-hour general increase. Davis declined to discuss the merits of the case, but observers pointed out that this demand could not be granted under the Little Steel yardstick, although it was possible that some adjustments might be made under other yardsticks employed by the board permitting the adjustment of interplant and intra-plant inequalities, etc.

If it is acknowledged that a change in wage policy is desired, Davis said, then it should be clear that their recourse is not to the War Labor Board. Such a question could be clarified in public discussion, he said.

Army Gets New Combat Shoe

Harris & Ewing

BATTLE-TESTED—After months of testing in U. S. and actual combat in North Africa and the Southwest Pacific, the Quartermaster Corps has designed and developed a new 10-inch leather combat boot which eventually is expected to replace the shoe-and-legging combination worn by Army ground forces, and the paratrooper boot, worn by parachute troops. Pvt. Paul L. Gable is shown trying one of the new shoes

U. S. Casualties In Gilberts Fewer Than Reported

American casualties suffered in the operations which won the Gilbert Islands from the Japanese six weeks ago will be somewhat less than originally reported, Capt. Leland P. Lovette, the Navy Department's public relations director, said yesterday.

Approximately two weeks after the assault the Navy estimated the casualties at 3772—1092 killed and 2680 wounded, almost all of them at Tarawa.

Lovette explained, however, that in operations such as the Gilbert Island landings men first reported killed or wounded often turn up later with other units.

The Navy also revealed that there were 268 survivors of the escort carrier Liscombe Bay, sunk November 24 during the Gilbert Islands operations. The number of casualties was not disclosed.

Vinson to Air Huge Profits Of War Plant

By Mary Spargo

Full facts concerning war profits made by the Northern Pump Co., and its subsidiary, the Northern Ordnance Co., Minnesota concerns whose stock is owned by John B. Hawley, jr., spearhead of a drive to abolish renegotiation of war contracts, will be disclosed on Capitol Hill within two or three days.

Hawley, who maintains a luxurious cabin cruiser on the Great Lakes referred to as "Navy Gravy," made sales totaling 68 million dollars to the United States Navy in 1942, chiefly of big gun mounts.

Detailed disclosure of his war profits will be made when Chairman Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia of the House Naval Affairs Committee releases a blast at big war profits as part of the fight against Senate Finance Committee amendments to the pending $2,275,600,000 tax bill, which opponents declare would virtually nullify the renegotiation law.

Minority Report Issued

Four Senators, led by Chairman Walsh (Democrat) of Massachusetts, yesterday issued a minority report dissenting from the proposed committee amendments as the first round in what will be one of the bitterest fights Congress will face after it returns January 10. Senators Connally (Democrat) of Texas, Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois and LaFollette (Progressive) of Wisconsin joined with Walsh.

From Capitol Hill sources The Post learned yesterday some of the facts in the possession of the chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee.

Prior to 1940 the Northern Pump Co. never had yearly sales totaling more than two million dollars. Net worth of the company, all of whose stock is held by Hawley and his family, prior to 1940 was $956,000.

In 1941 the company made sales to the Navy totaling 18 million dollars. Profits in 1941 totaled 5¼ million before taxes. After taxes profits were $1,841,000 or more than double the net worth of the company.

In 1942 sales to the Navy of this company, rated one of the finest war-time producers in the country, jumped to 68 million dollars. Before taxes profits were 21 million dollars or almost eight times the net worth of the company. After taxes the 1942 profits were about five million dollars or double the then net worth of the company, and five times the net worth at the time the company entered the war program.

Leased U. S. Facilities

The expansion of this company was accomplished by 16 million dollars worth of Government facilities leased to the Northern Pump Co., at $1 a year.

Hawley, who described himself in hearings before the House Naval Affairs Committee as "the world's greatest hydraulic machinery designer" jumped his own salary in proportion to the new earnings of his companies.

In 1941 and prior to the war, Hawley received a salary of $25,000 a year.

In 1942 he increased his salary to $442,000. (These figures are all without the scaling down of his salary by personal income taxes.)

For tax purposes, however, the Treasury Department disallowed anything over $60,000 as his salary as a legitimate cost item. The balance had to be taken from profits.

At hearings before the House committee, Hawley protested the Renegotiation Act and its application by the Navy Price Adjustment Board.

His argument followed that of other opponents of renegotiation in his claim that profits were needed to convert his shop to a peacetime basis.

Said Hawley to the House Naval Affairs Committee at hearings last summer:

"I hate being called unpatriotic during a formal meeting of the Navy Price Adjustment Board for not giving back the earnings of these men (his employes) to the Treasury . . .

"My children can make the best of the war profiteer stigma, but how in the name of God am I going to take care of these 50,000 loyal men, women and children and utilize the taxpayers' $25,000,000 investment in the finest machine shop in the world and convert to a peacetime basis of usable products on 2 per cent after taxes. Now that is my problem."

Hawley lives in Fridley, Minn., on the outskirts of Minneapolis. He has been consistently praised by both the Navy and WPB for his production record.

3 Die in D. C. Army Plane Crash

Firemen work over blazing remains of transport plane which crashed and burned early yesterday in a vacant lot at 11th st. and Alabama ave. se. Inset shows Lieut. Col. Ralph W. Hale, pilot of the plane, and one of three killed in the crash which occurred shortly after takeoff from Bolling Field.

obtaining transportation, of exactly the kind he wanted, at the time he wanted it. Crowded streetcars were a target of his complaints.

Only a block or so away three soldiers had died and three children were left fatherless.

Bolling Field authorities said the plane was a Beachcraft US-43, a small transport.

An important incident of the crash was an order by the War Department for Bolling Field officers to release official pictures of the wreckage.

They said that this was the first time that such an action had been taken here since the war began. The reason for it, they said, was that the plane was not of a secret type and it did not crash on Government property.

Colonel Hale was a native of Salem, Va., had graduated from the Fork Union Military Academy at Fork Union, Va.

Hale had received his flight training as a civilian pilot through the Civil Aeronautics Authority and was commissioned a service pilot at Langley Field, Va., in 1940. In 1941 he was transferred from Langley to Bolling Field where he was made a captain and in 1942, while stationed at the War Department here he was commissioned a major.

Surviving him are his wife and three sons, Ralph W. 3d, 7, Robert Jeffrey, 2, and Frederick Alan, 6 months; his mother, Mrs. Virginia Hale of Charlottesville, Va., and his father, W. N. Hale of Salem, Va.

President Takes Step to End Deadlock in Railway Dispute

ment. The carriers contended that both questions should be considered, creating a deadlock which a letter from President Roosevelt asking that he be permitted to consider the carriers' contentions failed to break.

President's Order

The President's order establishing the new Shaw board authorized the body "to consider the unsettled claims for wage adjustments of the nonoperating railway employes."

The President specified that the board's recommendations were to be made to him, but in effect ordered them to arbitrate the dispute by providing that the recommendations are to become effective 15 days after filed, unless upset by Economic Stabilizer Fred M. Vinson.

The dispute with respect to overtime grew out of a comment by President Roosevelt last May that he thought railroad workers were entitled to time and a half pay for work in excess of 40 hours a week, instead of after 48. The entire wage controversy has been hanging fire since September, 1942.

Last May, a special emergency board awarded the nonops an 8-cents-an-hour increase, but Vinson set it aside, proposing a sliding scale adjustment instead. The original Shaw board was set up to work out the sliding scale and recommended 10 cents to lower-paid workers, tapered to 4 cents in the higher brackets.

Wage Scales Frozen

The unions accepted it only two hours before President Roosevelt seized the railroads on December 27, but it has never gone into effect because the War Department ordered existing wage scales frozen during Government operation.

In addition to Shaw, members of the board are Judge Richard F. Mitchell, Fort Dodge, Iowa, and Walter C. Clephane, Washington, D. C., attorney.

The board must report to President Roosevelt within 30 days.

The operating wage dispute involving the firemen, conductors and switchmen, were clarified somewhat by the revelation that Alvanley Johnston, grand chief engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, J. J. Pelley of the Association of American Railroads, and M. W. Clement, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, acting as consultant to Maj. Gen. C. P. Gross, Army operator of the railroads, had asked Gross to grant the three unions the same wage concessions which the trainmen and engineers received—a 5-cent increase to cover overtime in addition to the 4 cents an hour awarded under the Little Steel formula.

The trainmen and engineers were awarded their increase prior to Government seizure because they agreed to presidential arbitration. The other three thus far have failed to accept the President's offer to arbitrate.

Appointment of the new emergency board in the nonoperating case by President Roosevelt had the effect of by-passing William M. Leiserson, chairman of the National (Railway) Mediation Board. Under outstanding executive orders, Leiserson normally would have appointed the board, but President Roosevelt short-cut the established procedure by appointing the board himself.

The railroad unions have charged that presidential action preventing the National Mediation Board from functioning in this rail wage disputes has destroyed the Railway Labor Act.

Point-Free Pork Plea Again Refused

By Christine Sadler

Another polite—but emphatic—refusal to grant the country a "pork ration holiday" of two weeks was handed farm State Congressmen yesterday by the War Food Administration and the Office of Price Administration, both of which declared no Nation-wide surplus of pork existed.

Senator Reed (Republican) of Kansas, to whom the joint report was addressed, said he would present the food agencies with a substitute plan to allow farmers to slaughter and retail their own surplus hogs on a point-free basis for a brief period.

WFA officials said last night 2500 cubic feet of cold storage space had been made available for meat during the past few weeks and a similar amount of space would be cleared and added within a matter of days. The 5000 cubic feet can accommodate 200 million pounds of meat, they said.

Manpower Bottleneck

Although providing a serious problem, storage—they declared—has not been the chief difficulty in the meat situation. Manpower shortages in slaughter and packing plants have provided the main bottleneck and caused the trouble for farmers with "surplus" hogs to market.

W. C. Crowe, director of the transportation and warehouse section of WFA, said recent food movements have done much to help clear up storage difficulties. During December, he said, the Russians moved 19 million pounds of butter which the Government had purchased for them under lend-lease agreement.

This butter shipment will fill nearly all Russian requirements for the next six months, other officials said, except for some deliveries of Carter's Spread—an "Army invention" which is 85 per cent butter and 15 per cent hydrogenated fat. The mixture, perfected during this war, is used mostly in the tropics and is the only type of butter spread which withstands high temperatures.

WFA officials said total Government food losses in November were approximately $5500, mainly due to spoilage, although purchases during the month reached 125 million dollars. This loss, they declared, compares "very favorably" with normal industrial food losses.

Rather than having too much food on hand, they said, the supply may seem very small in comparison to demands made on it or this year. Declaring they had made every effort to be ready for the "year of greatest military achievement," they insisted civilians should be grateful for food reserves on hand, since the greatest portion of storage stocks is earmarked for them.

Steel Ample, Work Stopped On 2 Plants

The War Production Board yesterday ordered a halt in construction of four steel plant units valued at $1,658,000 because, it said, the additional steel no longer is needed in the war effort.

Other Government-financed steel projects now under construction "are being reviewed for possible termination," WPB added.

The four projects halted are in steel works of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp. at Munhall and Braddock, Pa., Chicago, Ill., and Gary, dock, Pa.; Chicago, Ill., and Gary, for converting open-hearth steel into alloy and other high quality steels which now can be supplied, WPB said, in adequate quantity by existing facilities.

The four units were small and together would have produced only 41,000 tons of high quality steel annually. A previous cutback—affecting a nearly completed structural steel mill at the Geneva, Utah, plant of the Geneva Steel Co.—was a 16-million-dollar project alone. The net saving at Geneva was estimated at between one million and two million dollars.

Yesterday's WPB announcement came when the agency recommended to the Defense Plant Corp. the cancellation of fund grants for the four projects. A formal order terminating the projects and revoking priorities will be issued shortly, it was stated.

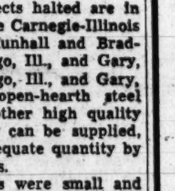
Expecting a Baby?



Mother's Friend helps bring ease and comfort to expectant mothers.

MOTHER'S FRIEND, an exquisitely prepared emollient, is useful in all conditions where a bland, mild anodyne massage medium in skin lubrication is desired. One condition in which women for more than 70 years have used it is an application for massaging the body during pregnancy . . . it helps keep the skin soft and pliable . . . thus avoiding unnecessary discomfort due to dryness and tightness. It refreshes and tones the skin. An ideal massage application for the numb, tingling or burning sensations of the skin . . . for the tired back muscles or cramp-like pains in the legs. Quickly absorbed. Delightful to use.

Bonus Amendment Faces Fight

Ranking members of the House Military Committee in a recent informal conference at the Capitol, decided to oppose efforts to tie a soldiers' bonus amendment to the pending mustering-out pay bill, it was learned last night.

The conference, called by Chairman Andrew J. May before returning yesterday to Kentucky, was attended by only five members of the committee but these were unanimously agreed to confine present action to mustering-out pay.

May has called a meeting of the full committee for Tuesday in an effort to hurry to the House floor a House committee version of the $200 to $500 mustering-out pay bill passed by the Senate before adjournment.

House Military Committee members will attempt to confine this to flat payments to all members of the armed services alike, regardless of length of service or overseas service. (The Senate provided differentials, with higher payments going to those long in the service and serving overseas.)

Leaders of the House group took the view that mustering-out pay was simply extension of a flat sum to enable all soldiers alike to get back on their feet, and "reward" for length of service or overseas service should be left for adjusted-compensation legislation.

The move to tie a bonus amendment to the mustering out bill was sponsored by Representative Overton Brooks (Democrat) of Louisiana, and there was still some uncertainty a sto whether the committee will have the votes to override it.

At the conference, Chairman May proposed instead that the two bills be kept separate, but that Congress take longer to work out an adjusted compensation law. May and other members of the group expressed doubt that the Military Committee would have jurisdiction over bonus legislation. The World War Veterans Committee of Representative John Rankin (Democrat) of Mississippi, is seeking jurisdiction over all World War II veterans' legislation, and may carry his resolution for widened authority to a House vote on the opening day of the new session.

Nazi Gloom

The abandonment by the Germans of Berdichev—so far they only admit the loss of the eastern half of that city—places the forces under Marshal von Mannstein in great peril. For with Berdichev gone, the only important rail line left to the Germans in the southern sector, the only one which is still available for a large-scale retreat from the Ukraine, is the line connecting Odessa and Lwow. And the surging Russian forces under General Vatutin are hourly coming closer to that line.

The Germans themselves make no bones about the seriousness of the situation confronting their troops in Russia. At Berlin yesterday a military spokesman admitted to neutral correspondents that the Nazi winter defense line on the Eastern Front has been split by a "very deep penetration." How deep that penetration is a glance at the map shows. From Gomel south the line bulges out widely to a point inside the Polish border, with the salient west of Kiev being pushed out constantly. This development is indicative both of the strength of the Red army and of the weakness of the enemy. For if the Germans had any strength to do so, this would be the time to launch a major counterattack. But they appear to lack that strength now.

The one considerable effort the Nazis have made in recent weeks—the thrust that resulted in the recapture of Zhitomir and Korosten—turned out to be a boomerang. And now the German armies in the south are effectively cut off from the German forces in the center and the north. The gloom in Nazi ranks is understandable.

Guaranteed Wages

Not only are the United Steelworkers asking for a guaranty of 52 full weeks of work a year under collective bargaining agreements but President Murray of the CIO is also preparing to launch a general campaign to secure minimum annual wages for industrial workers to be guaranteed by their employers. Mr. Murray says that the minimum-annual-wage plan is a "sensible way of combating widespread unemployment" and the only feasible means of protecting the Nation's workers from destructive economic postwar jolts. That is precisely the object of unemployment compensation. Moreover, the Fair Labor Standards Act, by requiring most employers to pay time and a half rates for hours above 40 a week, was intended to induce employers to spread employment evenly throughout the year.

If it were feasible, as the head of the CIO assumes, for employers in the capital goods industries to guarantee full-time work throughout the year to their employes, there would certainly be no need to worry about the future. We should be living in a veritable Utopia in which workers would be protected against the adverse winds of economic depression by regular receipt of full pay envelopes. The flaw in this rosy vision is that it overlooks the ups and down of business of which employers as well as employes are the victims. If orders and sales slump, the funds with which to make good minimum annual wage guarantees simply melt away.

During periods of sustained industrial activity, such as result from the extraordinary demands of war, some employers would have no difficulty in living up to promises to assure full-time annual wages to employes. The system has likewise proved practicable in certain consumer goods industries where demand is fairly stable year in and year out. Moreover, concerns with large working capital reserves at their disposal might be able to pay full-time annual wages for a considerable period, even if unable to provide full-time work for their employes. But it is obvious that a policy of paying out money for services not performed would ultimately lead to bankruptcy.

In short, guarantees of full-time annual wages are promises that can be kept only so long as business conditions remain favorable. Mr. Murray is pursuing a chimera in trying to stabilize wages in a country in which industry is notoriously unstable. Before that can be done, it is essential to provide a basis for sustained industrial activity. His cart must come after that horse. Hence the problem of immediate concern to every person in the United States—employers and wage earners alike—is how to lay the foundation for maintenance of a high degree of industrial activity after the war. Unless that can be done, a reduction in numbers employed and in the earnings of the employed will be inevitable.

Anonymously Speaking

The main point to be made about the statement attributed to "a personage high in the councils of the United States and of the United Nations" is that no newspaper was under the slightest obligation, moral or otherwise, to publish it. The statement, to be sure, contained very grave and serious accusations, but whether or not these accusations were true is outside the question. The first question is whether newspapers should permit any public official to make accusations for which he is unwilling to assume full personal responsibility, especially as the accusation was unsupported by factual or documentary proof.

The author of the statement was subsequently designated by Mr. Steve Early as a high military authority. Since Mr. Early knew this much, it suggests that the statement was not altogether spontaneous, but had been made with due reflection and after consultation with other personages even higher perhaps "in the councils of the United States and the United Nations." But Mr. Early's hint as to the possible identity of the personage who made the statement raises still another question, namely, that of jurisdiction. Such internal and domestic questions as threatened strikes involving civilians lie, or so we had assumed, outside the administrative jurisdiction of the military. It is obvious, of course, that any stoppage of work in the steel mills or on the railroads would have extremely serious military consequences. It might even be that the mere prospect of such strikes has delayed the collapse of Germany and given the Nazi regime a new lease of life. But if this is so, it would seem to us that the statement should have been made more appropriately by an official who has both military and civil jurisdiction, that is to say, by the President of the United States. It would have been all the more appropriate since we are assured by Mr. Early (who has either not discovered or disdains the advantages of anonymity) that the President "has been thinking along the same lines."

Less than a fortnight ago another high official warned us that we must be prepared for tremendous casualties—hundreds of thousands of them within the space of a few weeks. The interesting thing about this statement was that, although it dealt with an entirely military subject, it came not from a military leader but from a man primarily concerned with civilian industrial mobilization. Now by a similar paradox we have a military man setting forth his views on labor and industrial problems. Both of these statements may have been, and, we dare say, were, made in perfect good faith, but it is curious, to say the least, that they dealt with matters outside the field, of the respective spokesmen.

The suspicion that these statements may have been more of the President's ballons d'essai cannot be wholly avoided. The question is of the wisdom of newspapers in lending themselves to such possibly dangerous innovations. It is true that newspapers have themselves made possible the innovation by their former practice of occasionally permitting reporters to refer mysteriously to "well-informed quarters" and "high official sources" to disguise their own speculations or "think pieces" or as a way of protecting persons who had given them private and confidential information. Since the speculations were usually vague or the information frequently unimportant, it seemed an innocuous enough practice. What it really amounted to was an expression of confidence by the newspaper in the discretion of the reporter. In the last analysis it was the newspaper that took responsibility for the statements of its anonymous reporter. It is also the newspaper that takes responsibility for statements made anonymously by public officials, and not the official who makes the statement.

This, we should think, would be enough in itself to discourage the practice. But there are other and more important reasons. The practice tends in the long run to destroy the very function of a newspaper, which is to present the news. The important news about the statement, published on New Year's Eve, the one thing that made it an important news story, was the very thing the newspapers pledged themselves to omit. It is significant that when Mr. William Green wanted to find out who had made the statement he had, apparently, little difficulty. Thus the rise of a black market in news, so to speak, is by no means impossible. And the time may be coming when Americans will read newspapers as the Russians read Pravda and Isvestia, not for the news, but to try to fathom the latest shifts of official policy by observing the latest shifts of official propaganda.

True To Type

The announcement that the Library of Congress has purchased what are left of Frederic William Goudy's type drawings and master matrices, along with his vast collection of proofs and books, is a comforting, if somewhat belated, public recognition of a great American artist. Goudy's name is known to printers and book collectors everywhere in the world. Some of the type faces he has originated are as familiar and as beautiful as Caslon Old Style, or Garamond, or Bodoni or Jenson. Nevertheless he has been repaid, as he once said himself in a bitter moment, "mostly in acclaim." To make his situation worse, it is just about five years since the disastrous fire which destroyed Goudy's studio and foundry at Marlborough-on-Hudson. In that fire were lost most of his original designs and matrices as well as his most cherished possession, the press that William Morris had used for the Kelmscott Chaucer.

In an age in which printing has become, like almost everything else, an industry, Goudy was chief among that small group of designers and typographers which have helped to keep alive the ancient creative tradition of the craft. Their patronage, such as it was, came mostly from advertisers, but their influence has been felt throughout the whole trade and, though perhaps unconsciously, even by the general public. If books, magazines and printed material today reflect a greater degree of typographic taste and legibility than they did, say, at the turn of the century, it is due chiefly to the work of such men as Goudy and his wife, the late Bertha Goudy; Bruce Rogers and Norman Munder, and others.

Law's Delays

The law's delays are among the worst frustrations in the administration of justice. They were most pronounced after the last war, when the courts were clogged with cases arising out of disagreement between the Government and war contractors on compensation for war contracts. After the present war, there is prospect of the same interference if the present tax bill is passed. The item which will throw this monkey wrench into our judicial system is the change in the renegotiation law as passed by the full House and the Senate Finance Committee. By renegotiation of war contracts the Government recaptures excess profits arising out of the inability of both the armed services and the contractors to fix fair prices beforehand. The House decided that on petition those cases already settled could be reopened and reviewed by the tax court. The Senate Committee affirmed the House decision except that the reviewing court was changed from the tax court to the Court of Claims. The reason for the change was that the Senate Committee felt that in these important matters the petitioner was entitled to review by the judiciary, of which the Court of Claims is a part, instead of by a purely administrative tribunal like the tax court.

But, in any case, either court would be so inundated by renegotiation cases that it would be incapable of handling other cases in a matter of many years. Renegotiation cases are of two kinds. One is the settled kind; that is to say, contracts that have been renegotiated by the armed services and the war contractors by agreement. There are no fewer than 9000 of these contracts. The other variety is those cases which, failing an agreement with the contractor concerned, have been settled by the arbitrary order of the armed services. They might be called "impasse" cases. Every reason exists, of course, for submitting these disputes—for that is what they remain—to the tax court, even to the Court of Claims. But the giving of a chance to the war contractors to reopen, just by way of petition, cases already settled amounts only to judicial obstruction. This is one of the main charges occurring in the report just issued by the four-man minority of the Senate Finance Committee. Litigation would be invited, it says, "which neither party wants, thus tempting managements to wring the last ounce of litigious delay out of what has already been accepted as a good business deal."

It may be that Congress had heard complaints that the settlements by agreement were imposed by the armed services. As to this, we have no knowledge. But surely a safeguard against coercion or duress is available to the contractor, and, if it isn't, such a safeguard should be written into the present bill. Clearly the contractors should have recourse in the courts against tactics of this sort. But that is a different matter from inviting an avalanche of petitions for the reopening of renegotiation settlements merely on the off-chance that the contractors may recoup part of the money already refunded by agreement. The legislature should have a greater respect for the judiciary than the new recommendations imply. The courts do not exist to go over everything that has been done by administrative tribunals. If that were accepted practice, the courts would have no function left. The relation between the judiciary and administrative tribunals should be limited only to seeing that the administrative process is neither capricious nor unjust.

By a stroke of good fortune the Senate did not commit itself before recess to the paltry tax measure bearing these proposed changes in the renegotiation law, which was reported out by the Senate Finance Committee. We hope the Senators will use their vacation to think through at least the recommendations on changes in the renegotiation law. Agreements already made should remain closed, except where coercion can be proved. What the Congress could do in seeing that coercion is not applied is to provide the renegotiators with standards for application to the proceedings. Beyond that it would be folly to go, and the enormity of the folly is argued with cogency in the minority report of the Senate Finance Committee, which will repay senatorial study.

THESE WINTER PEARLS

No part of my garden is any lovelier
Than the corner where the yellow
Forsythia grows and blooms. I knew
The rich spring gold, the quiet green
Of summer when chipping sparrows
Found the tender branches a haven
For their nests. And I have known
Its winter loveliness when swollen buds,
Tinseled in ice, shook like strings
Of beads in the frosted wind.
These are the pearls that winter
Wears; they sparkle in the sun.

America At War

By Selden Menefee

California Gold Rush

RICHMOND, CALIFORNIA, is one of the few war boom towns which has been put under the spotlight of a scientific survey. In this city, one of San Francisco's East Bay industrial suburbs located just north of Oakland and Berkeley, a complete population census has recently been taken.

The study was made at the request of the local government, to establish the city's population growth so that more tax funds could be collected from the State. That growth has been phenomenal. The city has jumped from 23,642 in April, 1940, to 93,738 as of last September—quadrupling in size in little more than three years.

Many, but not most, of the 64,400 white persons who have moved to Richmond to work in the four big Kaiser shipyards are from Oklahoma and neighboring States. The new "Okies, Arkies and Texies," as the old residents call them, are very different from the migrants John Steinbeck wrote about. They came to take jobs paying $200 or more a month, instead of casual agricultural work at 15 cents an hour.

War-Born Migrants

These war-born migrants ask no favors, and are stable citizens despite the conditions under which they sometimes have to live. Sex crimes and delinquency have shown no appreciable increase in Richmond, despite the boom in population. Prostitution is negligible.

The city has also felt the westward war migration of Negroes. Its colored population has increased by 2000 per cent, from 270 to 5673. But there is little racial discrimination; these workers are needed, and hatred is reserved mainly for the Japanese.

The basic split in the town is between the "natives" (those who lived in Richmond before the shipyard boom) and the "newcomers." Little has been done to make the migrants feel at home. Shopping facilities are just about what they were three years ago.

Grocery prices are 10 to 20 per cent higher in Richmond than in Berkeley, a few miles down the Bay.

There are virtually no new recreational facilities, except for the community centers of the housing projects and one additional theater. Workers cash their checks in the beer parlors and spend generous portions of them on beer and slot machines. But even the beer joints close at midnight.

More than half of the population—close to 50,000—are employed, most of them by Henry J. Kaiser. Workers are still in demand, and unemployment is at the irreducible minimum—one-eighth of 1 per cent. Some 44 per cent of all females over 14 years of age have jobs. New schools and playgrounds have made it possible for housewives to contribute much-needed labor to the war.

Housing the Problem

Housing still remains the No. 1 problem, although to date 17,000 units of public housing have been built. When I was in Richmond some months ago people were living in shanties, garages and chicken coops around the city. Even now the average family requires two months to gain admittance to a housing project, and one census enumerator found 22 men sleeping in triple-decked "hot beds" in a single auto trailer.

Yet the census found 3000 empty housing units. This paradox occurred because house furnishings were lacking. Shipment of furniture from the East was prohibited by Washington authorities some months ago to cut down on transportation mileage, and West Coast furniture factories are still unable to fill the additional orders.

The housing shortage may grow worse. The intensification of the Pacific war will bring still more people to Richmond; already it claims to be the No. 1 port on the coast in point of tonnage. Then, too, the threatened gasoline shortage will force thousands of shipyard workers who commute in private cars from San Francisco and other towns to try to settle around Richmond.

At present less than half of Kaiser's 90,000 workers live near their jobs. The turnover rate in the yard approximates 100 per cent a year.

As the war progresses, Richmond is worrying more and more about what will happen after the armistice is signed. Business is divided into factions as to postwar policy.

One group, made of real estaters, property owners, and employes of the Standard Oil refinery and Ford assembly plants which once dominated the town, wants to get back to "business as usual" as soon as possible. They would tear down the war housing projects and move the war workers out.

The other group, led by the merchants, hopes that the "emergency" will not end with the armistice. They want to see the best of the war housing left standing, and prefer to believe recurrent rumors that Kaiser will keep one of his four yards going to make Victory ships for a year after the war, use a second to make smaller ships, and convert the others to the manufacture of flying boats and locomotives.

The migrants from Oklahoma and Texas side with the second group. They have found a more abundant life on the West Coast, and want to stay there.

Balkan Turmoil

By Barnet Nover

As The Red Army Draws Near

THE FACT of overshadowing importance in the Balkans today is that the Red Army is now a scant 150 miles from the borders of Rumania and is steadily drawing nearer.

Many other factors have contributed to the panic mood which is now taking possession of Hitler's Balkan satellites. There was that long succession of victories won by British and American forces in the Mediterranean in the 15 months since El Alamein. There was the collapse of Fascist Italy. There were the demonstrations at such places as Sofia and Ploesti of the nearness and growing strength of Allied air power. The Bulgars, the Rumanians, the Magyars know and have long realized that Germany has irrevocably lost the war.

But it is the westward advance of the Red Army, an advance of 800 miles since the victory at Stalingrad last February, that has had the greatest impact on Hitler's Balkan satellites.

THERE IS no reason to believe that Bulgaria, Hungary and Rumania would not have got out of the war long ago had it been physically possible for them to do so.

But they had the example of Italy before them of what happens to a deserting ally of the Third Reich who deserts at the moment when the Germans are still very much nearer than are the Allies. They have thus had to content themselves, thus far, with resistance to Hitler's never-ending demands for more cannon-fodder, with the exercise of a larger measure of independence in their internal affairs (that has been particularly true of Hungary) than they permitted themselves in the days when German might appeared to be irresistible, and with discreet peace feelers in the direction of the Allies.

EVEN TODAY we cannot safely assume that the defection of any of Germany's Balkan satellites is imminent. We can take it for granted that Hitler will do his ruthless best to prevent that from happening. The Gestapo is already on the job everywhere in the Balkans. The German army will not be behindhand if it becomes necessary to occupy Hungary, Rumania or Bulgaria in order to prevent them from making peace.

But the problem of control and dominance in the Balkans is no longer a problem in the hands of Germany and the satellite governments and peoples alone. With the approach of the Red Army, with the presence, on the other side, of Allied air power, and with the certainty that, before very long, an Allied invasion of the continent from the west and possibly from the south will take place, the problem has become triangular.

IT IS EVIDENT from the events of the last few weeks that Germany lacks even a shadow of the offensive power she once repeatedly demonstrated on the Eastern Front.

The failure of the ambitious offensive in the Kiev bulge, repeating the failure of last summer's offensive in the Kursk salient is proof of that. And while Germany still possesses great defensive strength, her military resources are obviously stretched thin.

Germany can only reinforce a threatened salient by reducing her strength in another. If she reduces it in Russia to insure the continued compliance of her satellites in the Balkans, this may enable the westward-moving Red tide to gain momentum. If she strips her garrisons in the west to hold back the Russians the coming Allied invasion may to that extent be hastened and made easier.

IN THE MEANTIME the Russian advance on the Eastern Front has reached a point where an Allied invasion of the Balkans, a remote possibility even as recently as last summer, has now become a probability. But the invasion may be not the anticipated invasion from the south but the result of Russian pressure from the east.

In other words, the time left for Hitler's Balkan allies to make up their mind as to what they ought to do is waning. They now realize that if they wait too long events will make up their minds for them.

This is particularly true of Bulgaria which not only is Russian-minded in sentiment but is also most vulnerable to Allied air attacks from the west and must also reckon on the possibility that Turkey will sooner or later go into the war against Germany.

For these reasons reports of cabinet crises, popular unrest, a rising peace clamor which are coming out of Bulgaria are worthy of credence. Yet any belief that Bulgaria is about to go out of the war must be tempered by the reports that a number of German divisions have been poured into that country and taken over its communications.

The Balkan pot is beginning to boil. But more military heat from the east and west may have to be applied before it boils over.

The Anonymous Statement

After reading the front-page story in yesterday's Post which constituted a terrible indictment of labor by an unnamed high official my reaction was "Et tu, Brute."

The article shocked me, but not in the way it was obviously intended that it should.

Was one person's opinion of such an obvious imponderable worthy of such an inflammable article which can have no effect whatsoever except to produce the bitterness which you have so loudly proclaimed we should dispel. We all know there are many persons who hold such views, but whether they are facts or not can never be ascertained. I can hardly believe that General Eisenhower's "victory in '44" was based upon a six-month delay because of threatened strikes or that the same reasoning dictated the number of replacements being trained for the fighting fronts.

I hold no brief for union leaders (and men) who have shortsightedly grabbed for their share (of course argumentative) of the billions of profits made by the railroads and steel companies, but let's bring all sides out into the open. SGT.

Washington, Jan. 4.

It is surprising how strong the feeling runs among the "enlisted personnel" of the services, namely the Navy and Marine Corps, concerning the strike situation. Needless to say, the men don't think it shows much of anything except an overwhelming desire on the part of both the strikers and employers to make themselves a little money before the war is over.

I've been wondering where this war would be if the serviceman waited to get a "proper" wage for his work, before fighting—do you think that you or anyone else can place a set wage on the value of the work done in warfare?

The serviceman is fighting to preserve his family, country and life, and the striker to save himself the discomfort of not having the normal abundance of luxuries. The American people forget that the majority of the common everyday things here are actually luxuries.

GEORGE CRAIG,
Corporal, USMC.

Bethesda, Md., Dec. 31.

The several hundred thousand American soldiers doomed to death by the threat of railroad and steel strikes probably have but one ambition: to have the time and the opportunity before they die to vote against the Administration which let the strikers get away with it.

MRS. J. E. WALSH.

Arlington, Va., Jan. 3.

It may be true that the "high personage" has no antilabor ax to grind, but it should be recommended to him that his wits would bear a little sharpening. May I suggest:

1. The Nazi propaganda machine is capable of feeding the people subjected to it whatever it chooses and can provide as many strikes and threats of strikes in the United States as it deems advantageous.

2. The chief contradiction to the Nazi propaganda machine would appear to be the short-wave presentations by Allied radio which certainly can present news material in its proper light.

3. Granting that actual strikes may suggest to Goebbels a line of propaganda, it seems a little foolish to think that it would have any such effect at the present time as prolonging the war by six days, let alone six months.

4. This is made pretty evident by the rest of your front page this morning, which reports the Red drive to within 35 miles of the Polish line, the repulse of the Japs and also Herr Hitler's New Year's message, which I am inclined to think got much closer to Goebbels' propaganda problem than domestic difficulties in the United States.

HARVEY PINNEY.

Washington, Jan. 1.

"A courageous official," you say in your editorial today entitled "Strikes Cost Lives," gives us a stiff dose. Who is this brave man who is afraid to let his name be used in connection with his highly speculative conclusion that the war has been lengthened six months? You say he is an "able and well-known military leader," "highly respected throughout the democratic world for his judgment."

He can scarcely be so highly respected for his sportsmanship and fair play, for his loyalty, or for his taste since he hides in anonymity like an enemy propagandist.

What about the ethics of the press in using this story? I believe in freedom of the press, but I believe also that these special rights that we grant in the public interest carry with them some equally special responsibilities.

WILLIAM E. WARNE.

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 2.

The mounting arrogance of labor leaders as evidenced by William Green's demand that General Marshall be "reprimanded" is the perfectly natural and inevitable result of the pusillanimous policy of the President to gloss over the labor situation instead of meeting it under his oath of office.

Greater Serbia

By Paul Winkler

Postwar Yugoslavia

THE DIFFERENCES between Marshal Tito's Partisans and General Mikhailovitch's Chetniks are usually described as being chiefly those between two diametrically opposed political ideologies—a radical, not to say Communist, theory on the one hand, opposed to a conservative, not to say reactionary or Fascist, theory on the other.

Possibly more basic is a divergence not often brought out—entirely contradictory viewpoints on the postwar organization of the territory known before the hostilities as Yugoslavia. The Partisan government of Tito and Dr. Ivan Ribar is founded on the concept that Yugoslavia will remain—that is, that it will constitute a federal linking of the various elements which make up that state in which no single group will dominate. The Mikhailovitch faction, on the other hand, is for a greater Serbia—a state in which the Serbs will either dominate the other nationalities, or, if that cannot be achieved, will simply leave such groups as are not willing to submit to Serbian leadership out of their state altogether.

Government in Exile

A majority of the members of the Yugoslav exile government appear to be in favor of the greater Serbia view. The favorite idea seems to be that Croatia should remain part of the postwar country, but that the government should be centralized in Belgrade and dominated by the Serbs. This tendency is symbolized by the fact that though no Slovenes are included in the exile cabinet, there are two Croats, Finance Minister Ivo Chichin-Shagin and Justice Minister Dr. Sorgo-Mirocevich. Earlier there had been other Croatians in the cabinets, together with some Slovene members, who united in protesting the publication of a report on Croat atrocities against Serbs, on the ground that the acts complained of were committed by a group of Croatian traitors, and should not be presented as evidence of the enmity of Croats in general to Serbians. The Croats and Slovenes were overruled by the Serbian members of the cabinet. Eventually the cabinet acquired a new membership, made up of diplomats and state officials appointed by the King (plus Mikhailovitch as Minister of War), which, though referred to as "nonpolitical," is strongly committed to the clearly political thesis of Serbian domination of the south Slav state.

Sakulitch's Story

In October, 1941, a Serb named Milos Sakulitch arrived in London, explaining that he had been smuggled out of Yugoslavia with underground assistance. The English, suspecting that he had, on the contrary been able to leave because he had been permitted to do so by the German puppet in Belgrade, Milan Neditch, arrested him; but the Yugoslav exile government intervened, and secured his release.

Sakulitch's story was that he had risked his life to escape from Yugoslavia in order to bring to the government a report on the atrocities committed against the Serbs by the troops of Dr. Ante Pavelich, the German puppet in Croatia. This report was alleged to have been written by the Serbian Orthodox Bishop Benjamin, as a complaint to German General Dunkelmann about the excesses of the Croats.

The extent to which the facts set forth in the report are accurate is not clear. What is known is that a great many copies of it were circulated in Belgrade before Sakulitch made his "escape." The Yugoslav underground suspected the Germans of circulating it, with the aim of causing a definitive split between the Serbs and the Croats.

But the Serbian ministers who overruled their Croat and Slovene colleagues in this matter sent a copy of the report to Yugoslav Ambassador Constantin Fotitch in Washington, and a few days later it was published by the most important Serbian paper in the United States, the Amerikanski Srbobran of Pittsburgh. Whatever the intent with which the atrocity report had been put out, the result was that Serbians close to the exile government in London and Washington seemed to accept the idea that any revival of Yugoslavia in its old form was out of the question.

The Srbobran adopted the anti-Croat view, writing, for instance, on November 14, 1941: "Only the politically ignorant and those of bad faith can dream of the possibility that Serbs and Croats can meet again to conclude a new agreement." On November 24, it added: "Croat history has no charm. Their politics has no greatness." On December 15: "Serfdom seems to be in their blood." And so on.

Mikhailovitch himself claims that his troops include not only Serbs but also Croats and Slovenes. Partisan supporters insist that the only non-Serb elements which have sided with Mikhailovitch were the Slovene White Guards, a Fascistic group which used to be allied with the Italians, but has now been wiped out by the Partisans.

Whatever the truth on this point, one thing seems certain: Mikhailovitch is definitely against a federal Yugoslavia, with equality for all the races which make it up, and for a Serb-dominated state, whatever elements are included in it. And in this stand, the present Yugoslav government-in-exile concurs.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

An Act Of Dedication

THE EVENTS of the past month have brought into sharp focus the reasons why the President should ask Congress to establish the principle of universal service and why Congress should then enact the Austin - Wadsworth bill.

LIPPMANN

THE DECISION to invade the European continent has been taken. During the preparation there must be no interruption of production and transportation for any reason whatsoever. The men who will invade Europe are entitled to have, and they must be given, absolute and unchallenged proof of the support of the Nation. No doubt must be left in the minds of our enemies, or in those of our allies, on this point.

If the invasion is successful and the German war is ended this year, we have still to carry the Japanese war to victory. There must be no letdown while the complicated movements are made of shifting our forces and our activities at home for the concentrated campaign in the Pacific. This transition will not be easy: it should be backed up by a universal service law which puts all civilians under the obligation not to quit when the war is only half won.

If the invasion is not successful, we may be in for a grueling struggle in which a high degree of national discipline will be particularly necessary.

STRIKES AND the threats of strikes are not the only impediments to the full and swift prosecution of the war. Congress has been the scene of a struggle by pressure groups and special interests to break down the control of war inflation, to undermine the control of war profits, and to prevent the imposition of adequate war taxes. All these things combined, the strikes and the legislative raids, are due to a double standard of morals—a different standard for civilians than for soldiers. The enactment of universal service is the only way of registering the principle that every adult person has a public obligation which comes before his private interests.

We are now at the beginning of the active electioneering which will lead through the primaries and the conventions to a national election. Politics cannot be abolished or adjourned. But politics should be subject to the interests of the nation which is at war, and the one comprehensive way to achieve that is to impose on every politician and every voter the personal obligation of service. This will help to remind him that the election is taking place during a great war.

UNIVERSAL SERVICE is a fairer and more intelligent measure than specific legislation outlawing strikes and aimed at the unions. The unions are not the only sinners. The positive obligation on each individual to serve the country at war is a far better thing to insist upon than a negative rule forbidding strikes. It will deal with many other forms of avoidance of public duty—for example, the tendency of men who have acquired training in public office to take lucrative private jobs, which happen to be empty and profitable because other men are at war, and so to profiteer personally at the expense of the Government and of those who remain at their posts.

WE SHOULD not hesitate to enact universal service because we can imagine complicated practical cases that would be difficult to administer. The adoption of the legal obligation will cause most men to do voluntarily what is demanded of them. The hard cases can be dealt with somehow. They have been dealt with in Britain where the sense of personal liberty is fully as strong as it is here.

The sooner we enact universal service, the more unanimously we adopt it, the greater will be the beneficial effect. For it will be the act, which really gives meaning to our words, dedicating the Nation completely to its duty.

U. S. Raids on Germany Reflect Growth in Air Power in War

By James F. King

The American Eighth Air Force is now reported sending as many as 750 heavy bombers against Germany in one attack but when the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor we had only 159 planes of this type, Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commander of the Army Air Forces, reveals in his report to the Secretary of War.

Our combat aircraft strength on December 7, 1941, totaled some 3000 planes but only 1157 of these were actually suited to combat service, Arnold says. Nine hundred and thirteen planes—61 heavy, 157 medium and 59 light bombers, plus 636 fighters—were scattered among Alaska, Hawaii, the Philippines, Puerto Rico, Panama, Trinidad, Newfoundland, Iceland, Greenland, the Virgin Islands, British Guiana and the Windward Islands.

"Five hundred and twenty-six were strategically located to meet possible attacks on the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands. Within a few hours that number was reduced to 176.

"On Luzon (one of the Philippines) it must be said, we had maintained an air alert since November 15. Even so, General MacArthur reported that at the end of the first day of war there were only 17 heavy bombers and approximately 70 fighters left out of a force of 35 B-17's, 30 medium and 8 light bombers, 220 fighters and 23 other airplanes.

15 B-17's Reached Australia

"In the days that followed, 14 of the B-17's managed to get to Australia, but the fighters were destroyed one after another . . . Those same 14 bombers formed the nucleus of our Fifth Air Force, now one of 15 American Army air forces."

The task of the Army Air Forces, Arnold says, was not only to build the world's most powerful striking force and fight with it all over the world at the same time but also to deliver planes and their accessories to our Allies as well.

"From Australia, the Pacific, China, India, the Soviet Union, the Near East, England—came pleas for more men and more planes, but altogether we had less than enough fully trained combat officers for any one theater. It was necessary for us to parcel out our airplanes among the many who urgently needed them in much the same manner that water from the last canteen is distributed among a party lost in the desert.

"Furthermore, had the Army Air Forces sent out all its planes from the United States, we could not have built the foundations for creating and training additional combat units. Accordingly, during a period of many months, calls to dispatch airmen and airplanes as stop-gaps to this or that area had to be refused in order to keep our training system intact."

B-17 Tail Guns Took Heavy Toll

"When tail guns were put on the B-17," says General Arnold, "a large number of Jap pilots were shot down before they caught on to the fact. They just kept coming in to attack from the rear and were promptly blown apart—until one smart Jap waiting to come in watched his friends go down, and then flew home with the news."

School Set Up Quickly

Arnold illustrates the speed with which the Army Air Forces "had to become the largest single educational organization in existence" by telling of a conference in Washington on February 18, 1942, to plan establishment of an officer candidate school for airforce administrative officers.

"Qualified officers said it would take at least three months to set up the school. They were informed that three months were not available; Hitler would not wait. The conference was held on Wednesday; the first classes were held in leased hotels in Miami Beach on the following Monday."

The increasing size of the Army Air Forces is indicated by the fact that over half the Army's entire production in 1944 will be aircraft and aircraft equipment. During January, 1942, this country produced 2972 aircraft; during January, 1943, 5013, and January, 1944, production is expected to be between 9000 and 10,000.

"It can now be announced," says the report, "that up to October 1, 1943, 26,900 planes have been exported to our Allies by lend-lease or direct purchase. Seven thousand have been sent to Russia under lend-lease.

Airport Control Forces Jap Moves

General Arnold says that when Germany conquered Norway it was a victory for air power. The control of airports was shown to be of paramount importance. "We learned. . . . Today, for instance, in the southern Pacific, we are forcing the Japs out of one locality after another by seizing airports which are then used by our planes to cut off Jap supply lines and thus make their bases untenable."

Production in 1944

The War Production Board has scheduled 145,000 planes for completion in the next 15 months; they will be heavier and more elaborately equipped, the average airframe weight of airplanes being now twice what it was a year ago.

"There must be no lag in production," Arnold warns.

"Not one of our air forces has the planes it should have.

"Every one could use double the number it now possesses.

"It is a difficult task to decide which air force must do without the planes it ought to have, knowing what our refusals mean. They mean that 100 planes have to do what would be a tough job for 200. The Salerno beachhead was one of the turning points of the war, and we had just enough aircraft to cover our landing forces.

"The biggest battles in the air and on land are yet to be fought.

"We will need every plane we can produce."

(Another article on details in General Arnold's report will appear tomorrow.)

Noisy Fight, Intrigue Face Republicans at Chicago Talks

By Edward T. Folliard

The Republican National Committee, which meets in Chicago next week to choose a date and a city for the 1944 GOP convention, is faced with a noisy battle over candidates and policies.

The Republicans like to keep their quarrels within the family. They are especially anxious to do so now in view of the luster that has been added to their hopes by recent election returns.

However, the dissension in the GOP, no less than in the Democratic Party, runs deep—too deep to be concealed much longer.

Next Saturday night, as the Republican strategists are gathering in Chicago, Gov. William H. Wills, of "rock-ribbed" Vermont, will make a Nation-wide broadcast over CBS, and the subject of his remarks will be: "Will the Republican Party Commit Suicide in 1944?"

What Governor Wills' idea of party suicide is remains to be seen. This much about him is known: He is a Wendell Willkie man, and at the Republican "little convention" at Mackinac Island, Mich., he upheld Willkie's views on foreign policy.

There are at least three things that disturb men like Governor Wills. They are:

1. The feeling which they say exists among some Republicans that the party is bound to win in '44—that it can win with any old candidate and any old platform.

2. The organized movement (as they discern it), which has for its purpose the "stopping" of Willkie and the naming of a hand-picked candidate, chosen in a smoke-filled room as was the case with Harding in 1920.

3. The drawing up of a Republican platform through the same kind of manipulations.

These suspicions are soon to be aired, and the ensuing debate promises to overshadow everything else that happens at Chicago next week.

Deadly German Land Mine Is GI's Pet Hate

By the Associated Press

Her name is Betty, she's neither coy nor winsome, has only three teeth and a flat face, and she has been elected public enemy No. 1 by American doughboys in Italy.

She's not a pin-up girl, this "Bouncing Betty"—she's a pin-your-ears-back gal if you get too close.

Sardonic American humor gave this hilarious name to what the slogging foot soldiers have found to be the Nazis' most terrible weapon in hilly Italy—a small land mine.

The retreating Germans have been generous with these little weapons of destruction which have just about destroyed the G. I. faith in the old axiom—"anything I hear, I can duck." You can't hear Betty until she blows, then it's too late.

Col. William R. Blakely of Laurens, S. C., brought back to the War Department the tale of Bouncing Betty, which the United States forces rank even above tank fire as a hazard.

The mine—the Nazis call it their S-mine—is buried just beneath the surface. Three tiny metal teeth protrude, and contact sets off a small charge, which throws the can five feet in the air. There the main charge goes off, spewing metal horizontally in all directions.

Only occasionally a soldier can hear that first tiny, muffled pop and hurl himself to the ground to escape the hail sure to follow.

"I heard of a soldier who stepped on a can of this type," said Blakely. "Nearby were his company commander and several other soldiers. Although he heard the first pop, he made a quick and courageous decision. He deliberatly remained standing on the mine. He lost a leg, but he saved the lives of his commander and comrades."

Senate Group Defers Questioning Of Craig in Probe

Over the protest of Robert Craig, former acting chief of the Rural Electrification Administration, the Senate Agriculture Subcommittee decided yesterday to postpone its questioning of Craig in an investigation of the REA.

Craig appeared before the subcommittee and said he was ready to testify, but Senator Shipstead (Republican) of Minnesota, acting chairman, said the session was being deferred because of the absence of Chairman Smith (Democrat) of South Carolina.

Craig explained he is planning a trip to Mexico this month as a representative of a copper company.

Craig became head of REA in 1939 after John Carmody resigned in protest against making the formerly independent agency a bureau of the Department of Agriculture.

Hrdlicka Asked His Ashes, Wife's Rest in Museum

Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, world-famous anthropologist, who died September 5 at the age of 74, asked in his will, it was disclosed yesterday, that his ashes be mixed with those of his first wife and be placed in National Museum. Dr. Hrdlicka was curator of the Division of Anthropology at the museum for many years.

The petition for probate of his will filed in District Court showed that he had an estate in excess of $50,000, part of which is to go to the National Academy of Sciences and the Smithsonian Institution for the promotion of research in physical anthropology.

His second wife, Mrs. Mina Hrdlicka, is to benefit from a trust fund also. He left his scientific books to the National Museum.

The will was filed by Attorney Paul J. Sedgewick.

Grand Jury Brands Stewart's Money-Bag Story 'Contempt'

The special District grand jury investigating sedition asked yesterday that Douglas M. Stewart, suave one-time copublisher of the defunct Scribner's Commentator, be held in contempt of court for telling a story about "finding" 1800 $20 bills—a story which even Stewart's counsel stated was "outlandish."

The whole grand jury appeared before Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher and through O. John Rogge, special assistant to the Attorney General, asked that Stewart be sentenced summarily. Justice Eicher took the matter under advisement.

Rogge, reading from the grand jury minutes and summarizing, said this was Stewart's story of how he obtained the $36,000 which was used to begin publication of a Lake Geneva, Wis., weekly newspaper called the Herald, which had, according to a letter Rogge showed, Ralph V. Townsend, convicted Japanese agent, as a part owner.

Stewart, coming home one day on July 11 in Lake Geneva, found a brown paper bag with a pile of $20 bills which he estimated at $15,000. Later that month he found a black bag containing a like sum. One month later he went to his office and found $6000 more.

The grand jury didn't believe it.

Seth Richardson, representing Stewart as counsel, said the story was definitely "outlandish," but that Stewart insisted again and again that it was true. Richardson said he could understand that many people sympathized at the time with the publication (anti-British, antiwar, anti-Roosevelt) but that certain of these people would not want it known they were connected with "such fly-by-night" ventures.

The grand jury on Monday returned an indictment charging 30 persons with conspiring to undermine the morale of the armed forces and set up a Nazi-type regime here. Stewart was not among those indicted.

Lawrence Dennis, 50-year-old veteran under indictment, who says he is "isolationist—and proud of it," pleaded innocent yesterday in Pittsfield, Mass., to the charge and was released for hearing January 12. He was arraigned before a U.S. commissioner.

William Crawford, a member of the Times Herald editorial staff, was named president of the Washington Newspaper Guild as an unchallenged candidate, the executive committee announced yesterday.

Elected to other posts were Blair Bolles of the Star, first vice president; Robert H. Shackford of UP, second vice president; Dorothy Rockwell, Washington correspondent for the Philadelphia Inquirer, reelected secretary, and Joseph Van Denburg of the Star, reelected financial secretary. The new treasurer is Charles Chalkley, a member of The Washington Post circulation department.

Crawford, a former vice president of WNG, succeeds Al Toombs, who is entering the military service.

Elected to the executive committee were:

Gordon H. Cole, American Newspaper Guild international vice president and Washington correspondent of PM of New York City; Elisabeth May Craig, Washington correspondent for a group of Maine newspapers; Harry Gabbett, Times Herald staff and Raymond Gray, Times Herald advertising department; Urcel Daniel, United States News; Warren Moran, representing guild members now with the Federal Government; E. F. Vanderveen and Betty Norton, The Washington Post; Martha Strayer, Daily News. Sergeants at Arms: Al Brandon, Post, and Frank McKeever, United States News.

Home-Made Penicillin Dangerous, Says Drug's Cocreator

By Walter Wood

Dr. Robert D. Coghill, one of the scientists chiefly concerned with developing the "miracle drug" penicillin yesterday condemned the "home made" variety as dangerous and disclosed for the first time that industry is now producing enough penicillin for civilian requirements.

Dr. Coghill arrived in Washington to attend penicillin conferences with Government scientists and War Production Board officials.

He warned amateurs against thinking they can make the true drug out of any green mold they see. The chances against penicillin being in any of the home-made types are more than 100 to 1, he said.

There is already "appreciable quantities" of penicillin available for civilian use if applied for through the proper channels, Dr. Coghill said. Meanwhile, he declared, production is being stepped up month by month and will be increased many fold by spring.

Not Simple to Make

Feeling that persons are being misled by recent reports that penicillin is so simple to prepare that it can successfully be made in the kitchen, the scientist admonished novices that there are still many pitfalls to catch both bacteriologists and chemists.

"We've recently tested some samples of alleged penicillin prepared by people unfamiliar with the proper procedure and found them completely devoid of penicillin," he said.

"I've never heard of an ill effect from 'penicillin' of that type," Dr. Coghill said, "but the time to put in your word of warning is before the horse is stolen, not afterward."

Improper Preparation Stresesd

Stressing the dangers of using improperly prepared and inadequately tested substances alleged to be the miracle drug, Coghill said doctors may think they are using penicillin when in reality they are not.

"They may lose patients," he said. "And penicillin will get a bad name."

Coghil is chief of the division in penicillin research at the Northern Regional Research Laboratory, operated by the Department of Agriculture, at Peoria, Ill.

He and Kenneth B. Raper, senior microbiologist, issued the first warning about "kitchen-stove penicillin" in a letter to the Journal of the American Medical Association, in which they said:

"Statements to the effect that Penicillium notatum is the green or blue-green mold found on bread, cheese or other foods are quite misleading if, in fact, not actually dangerous. This species does often occur on these products, but so does a great variety of other blue-green molds. In the genus Penicillium there are literally scores of blue-green species which can be distinguished from Penicillum notatum and its allies only by painstaking laboratory cultivation and microscopic examination. . . .

"We consider it a conservative estimate that not 1 out of 50 of the blue-green molds encountered belonged to the Penicillium notatus group. Not more than 1 out of 100 represented the species Penicillium notatum itself, and only one of a limited number of these produced appreciable yields of penicillin. . . ."

Taft to Cooperate In Any Subsidy Compromise Plan

Senator Robert A. Taft (Republican) of Ohio said yesterday he stood ready to "cooperate" in any new attempt to compromise the congressional subsidy dispute, but that Senate leaders have not approached him as yet with any compromise plan.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley recently indicated he would confer with Taft and other Senate Banking Committeemen in an effort to work out a settlement. Taft said he had no changes to propose as yet in the Taft compromise amendment, rejected by the committee shortly before Congress recessed. He said he is considering an increase in the 600-million-dollar limit his amendment originally provided for subsidies.

With Shirley Povich

George Marshall (not to be confused, positively, with the general of the same name) is in the switches again. This time he has been fined $500 by Elmer Layden, commissioner of the National Football League. Layden took action after Marshall's run-in with Ralph Brizzolara, general manager of the Chicago Bears, during the recent play-off game at Chicago.

POVICH

Brizzolara, learned, too, that a man can't pick his company at all times. He also was slapped with a $500 fine for his part in the affair, which Layden says was not "reciprocal of the public confidence in the National Football League," and did not "promote the interest of professional football."

Marshall has demanded a hearing on the fine, and Brizzolara says he will protest it, too. Brizzolara pleads innocence. "Some players came to me just before the half ended and told me Marshall was on our bench and they wouldn't stand for it," he said. "I said they didn't have to, and immediately told Marshall to move elsewhere."

He didn't mingle with Marshall at all, Brizzolara declares indignantly. He asserts "Jack Goldie, our equipment manager, on his own volition, forcibly tried to eject Marshall," adding "at no time was I nearer than 5 feet from him."

Injured innocence is also Marshall's plea. He says the fact he was near the Bears bench before the half ended was an accident and that he violated no rule of the league. He said he was merely trying to get to the Redskins' dressing room before the half ended and his route took him past the Chicago bench.

Marshall says he was within his rights in being on the field. "Every club owner except one sat on his team's bench in our home games, and I have access to the field according to the league constitution. I always wish to protect the interests of the Washington team."

Marshall didn't say what particular interests of the Washington team he was wishing to protect at that time, or how he would protect them.

The Redskin players may not want any more of the Marshall type of pprotection he tried to give them in November when he asked the Washington police to shadow them and report to him if they were associating with gamblers or hanging around whisky places. He proved to be something less than a great morale builder, and his team lost three games in a row and nearly lost the Eastern section championship.

Marshall says he hasn't seen Brizzolara since he got the shoving-around in Chicago, and at that time he remarked "Brizzolara is no gentleman and I'll never speak to him again." Whereupon Radio Commentator Russ Hodges said, on the air, "What a break for any man."

The Army Air Force Training Command is proud not only of Lieut. Tommy Harmon's two escapes after bailing out over the jungles and swamps—once in Guinea and once in China—but it is proud, too, of the physical training course Harmon took before winning his wings.

Many a trainee has taken to heart the lesson learned from Harmon's experiences, says the Training Command, since Harmon gratefully acknowledged that his physical condition saved his life twice.

The Training Command people recall now Harmon's great faith in physical condition even as an aviation cadet, and while he was at Oxnard, Calif., for his primary training, Cadet Harmon wrote a magazine article on the value of the conditioning program. He lived up to the words he wrote by keeping himself in peak physical condition at all times.

"Had he not done this, the chances are that he would not be with us today."

Tech. Sergt. Paul Lathrop who put Harmon through the paces at Williams Field, Ariz., where the flier took his advanced training, says: "He knew from experience that in order to get anything out of a physical training program he must put something into it. On numerous occasions, Lieutenant Harmon asked to remain in the athletic area after his squadron had been dismissed, in order to do some cross-country running or distance swimming."

The rest periods and slow cadence of the conditioning exercises have now been discontinued, incidentally, in the Training Command. They've streamlined it. The new version of "running" is a combination of running and walking over cross-country courses, obstacle courses running, climbing and sprints. The combative spirit is built up by judo and ranger tactics. "War Time Swimming" means swimming while clothed, using shirts and pants as life preservers, and instruction in swimming through burning oil.

Dunbar Five Beats Parker-Grey, 38 to 21

Dunbar High School won its opener against Parker-Gray High School at Alexandria, 38-21, yesterday, with Maurice Majors high scorer for the winners.

William Majors of Park-Gray topped his teammates in scoring and wasn't satisfied with dropping them into the Dunbar basket. He got confused as to which end of the floor was which and tossed one through the Parker-Gray loop to add 2 points to the opponents' score.

Future Uncertain
Golf Meetings Hereabouts Are Delayed

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The Middle Atlantic Amateur, Maryland State and Middle Atlantic Pro Golf Associations have virtually decided to pass up the usual winter meetings scheduled in January, while the District Golf Association will decide at an executive committee meeting this month whether to hold its annual February session.

Last January in a travel and time-saving move the Mid-Atlantic, parent association in this section, and the Maryland State met here the same day but Harry G. Pitt, president of the Mid-Atlantic, and Dr. Robert A. Keilty, Maryland State president, both said yesterday they preferred to wait until spring to take any action this year. No new slate has been named for the Maryland body.

Pro Meeting Delayed

The Middle Atlantic PGA will not sponsor a pro confab until the golf season according to present plans, Gene Larkin, Woodmont pro and secretary-treasurer, said yesterday. John Flattery, acting president of the pro golfers of Maryland, Virgina and the District, has been replaced as Country Club of Maryland pro by Andy Gibson and at present Flattery has no golf connections.

Dr. A. Thomas Utz, president of the District Golf Association, has called an executive committee meeting for late this month and it will be decided at that time if the regular first Monday in February meeting date will be retained.

The District Women's Golf Association held its annual meeting in December and Mrs. Frank Mirth, the new president, will meet with her executive committee some time this month to plan for 1944.

Sponsored Two Events

The Maryland State sponsored only the junior open and senior championships last year and the District a mixed scotch foursome. The Middle Atlantic group, decided at its winter meeting last year to pass up competitive events for 1943 while the pro golfers played in three club-sponsored events, at Indian Spring, Chevy Chase and Kenwood, but canceled all State and city championships. Golf play was interrupted twice in '43 by the pleasure driving ban.

Dr. Keilty is anxious to organize a "Boost Golf" campaign among the local associations and he plans to make it a major issue at the Maryland and Middle Atlantic meetings, if and when held.

According to the rotating system the Middle Atlantic amateur championship is slated for Charlottesville, Va., this year, the Maryland State at a Baltimore course and the MAPGA in Baltimore, but the possibility of any of the tournaments being played is remote unless for war charities.

'Y' Basketball

One-sided games marked the opening of the Y.M.C.A. Member League basketball last night on the "Y" court, Jefferson High School of Falls Church defeated Boy Scout Troop 73, 52 to 7, with Wayne Fowler's 24 points outstanding. The "Y" Flashes won, 37 to 19, over Woodward School, led by Monte Morgan with 12 points, while Westminister Presbyterian Church defeated Congress Pages, 27-13, with Sanford high scorer with seven points.

Riders Edge B-CC, 20-18 In Thriller

Roosevelt's first basketball outing of the season against Bethesda-Chevy Chase yesterday was a winning one but the manner of its winning was reminiscent of a play by Thornton Wilder. The score was 20-18. The name of the Wilder play was "The Skin of Our Teeth."

Bernie Citrenbaum, who managed a lot of the Roosevelt scoring during the football season, made five of the Rough Rider points. That is no unusual feat in a basketball game, and was, in fact, equalled in that game by a teammate, Mulitz. But two of Citrenbaum's points, a field goal made during the last minutes of play, were the margin of victory for Roosevelt.

Bethesda Chevy Chase was playing nip to Roosevelt's tuck throughout. The score at half-time was 10-9, exactly half of the final score. The thriller got even more thrilling in the final quarter when Bethesda-Chevy Chase tied it up at 18-all. Things rocked along at the impasse for minutes before Citrenbaum dropped one through and Roosevelt managed to keep it under wraps.

Bethesda's scoring was well distributed, with Getzinger, O'Brien, Chappell and Hughes tallying four points apiece.

Gonzaga defeated Devitt Prep, 34-27, in a hard fought battle between the centers yesterday. The jump men were the top scorers of the game, with Van Wagner's 15 points for the losers not sufficiently supported to turn the tie. Carroll, Gonzaga center, accounted for 11 points.

Bruins' Hollett Balks at Trade

Boston, Jan. 5 (INS).—Flash Hollett, star Bruins defenseman, refused flatly tonight to report to the Detroit Redwings.

Hollett's decision came after it was announced he had been traded for Pat Egan, who has been playing defense for the Wings this season.

"I'm going home and I won't play for Detroit tomorrow night . . . if ever," Hollett told reporters. "I know that being shifted from one city to another is part of a hockey player's career, but that doesn't lessen my disappointment."

Now Mrs. Luckman Learns About Ships

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Sid Luckman, who passed the Chicago Bears to the pro football championship over the Washington Redskins last season, explains his new activities as ensign in the Merchant Marine in the trophy room of their New York home. Luckman is stationed at the U. S. Maritime Service Station, Sheepshead Bay, N. Y.

N.Y.U. Beaten By Penn State; St. John's Wins

New York, Jan. 5 (INS).—A pair of free throws in the last minute gave Penn State a 37-to-36 basketball victory over N. Y. U. before 15,000 fans tonight in Madison Square Garden.

In the second game of the doubleheader, St. John's of Brooklyn defeated its old rival from Manhattan, C. C. N. Y., 45 to 38.

State mishandled several passes and its shooting was poor at the start, but the visitors soon made good on their marksmanship to take a 15-to-11 lead near the end of the first period. New York closed in, however, and trailed at the half by only one point, 17 to 16.

The score was tied at 45 points with only two minutes left in the game on shots by New York's Howard Sarath and Frank Magnipake. Then fouls by Sarath and Ralph Branca were turned into one-point scores by Don McNary and Bug Long to give State a two-point lead.

With less than a half minute left to play, Sarath was fouled by Walter Funk and given two free throws. He made the first one, but missed the second and gave State its one-point verdict.

Gene Desautels Gets Deferment

Southbridge, Mass., Jan. 5 (AP).—Eugene (Red) Desautels, catcher for the Cleveland Indians, has been granted a draft deferment until February 2, according to his selective service board.

Desautels, who makes his home in nearby Dudley, was scheduled to report at Fort Devens for his physical examination and induction today but an order was received by the local board from the State Selective Service director to defer him, according to Mrs. Clarice McKinstry, clerk of the local board. No reason is given for the deferment.

Macricostas, Evans Finish In Mat Draw

Don Evans and George Macricostas spent most of the week arguing over who would referee their headline mat bout at Turner's Arena last night, and when they finally reached a decision a referee wasn't necessary as they drew in a one-hour time limit match before 1400 fans.

Tom Mahoney, wrestler and former fighter was the third man in the ring, and a few minutes before he needed a referee—to be counted out—as he lost to the Yellow Mask in 17 minutes as the Mask applied a leg lock.

The unbeaten two-man team combination of Maurice LaChappelle and Johnny Long won in two of three falls over Mike Demetra and George Vansky. Michele Leone defeated Jack Bishop when the latter was disqualified after 20 minutes.

La Motta, Zivic Fight Fourth Time

Detroit, Jan. 5 (AP).—Holding a 5-to-1 series edge, Jolting Jacob La Motta of New York will fight Fritzie Zivic of Pittsburgh for the fourth time in a 10-round bout January 14 at Olympia Stadium.

Matchmaker Nick Londes announced today La Motta had accepted terms to meet the former welterweight champion in the Detroit ring where last year La Motta drew some $75,000 as his share of the gate for six fights. La Motta split two decisions at Pittsburgh and seized the series lead last fall by winning at Madison Square Garden.

Game and Dance

The U. S. Marine Corps allotment division quint and the Sanders team, first and second teams in the Potomac River Naval Command League, will meet at Thomas Jefferson Junior High gym at 8 o'clock tonight. The game will be followed by a dance.

L. A. Pro Tops Qualifying For Open Golf

Los Angeles, Jan. 5 (AP).—The veteran Harry Bassler of Los Angeles put together a 72 and a 70 for a 142 to show the way to qualifiers today in the $12,500 Los Angeles Open Golf championship.

Bassler's steadiness over the Fox Hills Course, slowed by recent rains, enabled him to lead the 128 who will start off Friday over the Wilshire Country Club course in the championship round. The event will close next Monday.

In second place a stroke back were Eddie Nowak of Inglewood, Calif., and Bobby Rosberg of San Francisco.

Among the 20 top-notch performers who were exempt from the qualifying round were Johnny Revolta, Jug McSpaden, Willie Goggin, Ed Dudley, Leo Diegel, Harry Cooper, George Von Elm and Johnny Bulla.

Costantino at 137 For Friday Bout

New York, Jan. 5 (AP).—Lulu Costantino expects to weigh around 137 pounds for his 10-round non-title fight with Lightweight Champion Beau Jack at Madison Square Garden Friday night. Jack expects to come in at 138.

Costantino tipped the scales at 139 and Jack at 142¼ yesterday when they underwent a fitness examination by the State Athletic Commission.

Noumea, New Caledonia, Jan 5 (AP).—Tom Heeney, who fought Gene Tunney in 1929 for the world's heavyweight title, has been promoted from a seaman to a chief petty officer in the American Navy. He is boxing instructor at a Navy recreation park.

Ted Atkinson Rides 26th Fla. Winner

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 5 (AP).—Mrs. F. C. Salsbury's Sparkling Maid, saddled by Hirsch Jacobs and piloted by Ted Atkinson, outfooted 10 other veteran sprinters in the Coral Way Purse as the Gables Racing Association had one of its busiest weekdays this balmy afternoon. A throng of 5548 installed Sparkling Maid a $4.30 favorite and the filly obliged by giving her trainer a double on the card and No. 16 at the meeting. It was Atkinson's twenty-sixth local success.

W. W. Crenshaw's Zaca Rosa was an easy second, four lengths in advance of W. L. Guinasso's Page II. The winner, second in her last two tries, missed the 6 furlong track record by only two-fifths of a second as she whirled home in 1:10 2-5 under a mere 102 pounds.

As in her previous outing, Sparkling Maid wore four bandages. However, the speedy 4-year-old ran one of the best races of her career. Atkinson sent her away in front. Dispose, a veteran which seems to have lost—at least temporarily—all but his early foot, charged up to race head and head with the favorite for more than a quarter mile. Then Sparkling Maid really sparkled, pulling clear with blazing speed. She was not threatened by Zaca Rosa when the latter, aways a forward contender, closed resolutely. Page II, a factor from the start, could not match Zaca Rosa's stretch spurt.

Alfred Robertson, who retired from the saddle the past season to turn trainer, sent out his first winner in the mile and a sixteenth of the seventh race. The 8-year-old gray gelding Doubt Not, once a shifty campaigner, literally ran away from his company. Rated a sprinter, the old fellow opened up a 10-length lead and, instead of "coming back," he continued to show up the others by that margin to the wire. The veteran, paying $34.10, ran the first six furlongs in 1:11 flat, enough to make the pursuers dizzy, and finished out in 1:44. Queen Echo was second, with Long Straw a length behind.

Hard Bargain, $6.10, won the last race by a length, surviving a foul claim and giving apprentice Scawthorn a double. Bouncing was second and Cuth third.

The day's play jumped to $430,789.

Yanks Announce Spring Schedule

New York, Jan. 5 (AP).—The New York Yankees announced today a schedule of 16 spring exhibition-game dates, with 12 of them already filled. Other major league clubs will be the opposition in 10 of the games, the world champions meeting the Brooklyn Dodgers five times, the New York Giants and Philadelphia Athletics twice each, and the Phillies once.

The squad will report at the Atlantic City camp March 13, and the first exhibition is scheduled April 1. The games already booked:

April 1, Phillies at Atlantic City; April 2, Dodgers at Atlantic City; April 3, Dodgers at Atlantic City; April 5, Dodgers at Trenton; April 7, Athletics at Atlantic City; April 8, Athletics at Atlantic City; April 9, Giants at Atlantic City; April 10, Giants at Atlantic City; April 12, Newark at Plainfield; April 14, 15 and 16, Dodgers at Brooklyn.

Ramspeck in Opposition To Promotion Act Change

Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee, doubts the wisdom of changing his automatic promotion act to bring about speedier promotions of Federal employes as suggested to Congress by the Civil Service Commission. "Under present conditions," he said, "no law we could pass would work satisfactorily as the employes could always say that they could do better somewhere else." Ramspeck did say, however, that his promotion law was meant for peacetime conditions, and he admitted it didn't satisfy wartime needs but, he said, the present conditions would be over in a year or two and after that time the present law would prove to be adequate.

Furthermore, Ramspeck doesn't believe that speedier promotions is the answer to the problem. He's inclined to favor a more flexible law under which efficient employes could get additional promotions. In addition, he believes it may become necessary to enact legislation to make the jobs of stenographers more attractive. Ramspeck is interested in the charge that the acute steno shortage was brought about in Government by the promotion of stenos to less important and higher-paid clerical jobs. Dozens of stenos have written this column to complain that they must get out of stenographic work to get a pay raise. The usual steno's salary is $1620, a few get $1800 and a smaller number get $2000. Clerical employes have the same starting salary scales as stenos and typists and their chances of promotions, it's charged, are much greater. Higher steno salaries would help solve the problem.

In its report to Congress, the Civil Service Commission didn't say specifically how long a wartime employe should wait before he should be given an in-grade promotion. It merely said that the present 18- and 30-month waiting periods should be "materially shortened." However, it's generally believed the commission will go along with the suggestion made by the Council of Personnel Administration that low-paid employes be required to wait a year and an 18-month period be required for employes who now must wait 30 months. Moreover, the commission wants the law made more flexible so that outstanding employes can be given more than one in-grade promotion during a waiting period. Ramspeck agrees with the latter suggestion.

The commission may be able to make a splendid case for speedier promotion—a case based on economy. Many personnel officers say off the record that they must find ways of giving the costlier grade promotions to good employes in order to keep them. A large percentage of these people, personnel officers believe, would be satisfied with an in-grade promotion which they can't get until after they've served the waiting periods. In these times it must be admitted that waiting 18 months to get a $60 or $100 annual raise isn't what you'd call an incentive. Most people will get the raise, employes say, and it makes no difference whether they "goldbrick" or work hard.

Ramspeck also has served notice that he'll fight the Senate bill that would raise the annuities of retired employes by 15 per cent. In fact, he believes this legislation is a real threat to the Civil Service retirement system and if this or any similar bill was passed the employes would live to regret it. His point is that the present retirement system is based on an actuarial concept and now each employe knows in advance what his retirement will be and he can plan on it. The Senate bill, he says, would place the retirement system on a cost-of-living concept which would threaten the stability of the retirement system.

"The employes who now must pay 5 per cent of their salaries into the retirement system," Ramspeck explained, "would have no idea what their annuities would be if the actuarial concept is changed to a cost-of-living base. Who knows, some future economy-minded Congress might decide to cut retirement annuities in half and it could easily point to the 15 per cent wartime increase as justification." The legislator and long-time friend of Federal workers warned that those who are supporting the bill were playing with dynamite. Of course, it is true that Congress has increased veterans' pensions by 15 per cent and that the additional amount is more than offset by the cost of living.

Ramspeck also is opposed to the other section of the Senate bill which would have the effect of allowing employes retired before January, 1942, to refigure their annuities under the liberalized act. This act provided substantially higher annuities for top-bracket employes. His opposition to this provision is based on the contention that the Government now pays the bulk of their annuities as the retirement act is only 23 years old, and the employes weren't compelled to pay up their accounts as employes are today. The Aiken bill, which would provide retirement for Federal workers after 30 years' service regardless of age, also will be fought by Ramspeck. Ramspeck's views are important, as no substantial employe legislation can get through the House without his okay.

Portable School Use Abandoned

Voting to abandon the use of portable schools, the Board of Education yesterday asked the Commissioners to seek funds from the FWA for construction of an addition to the Kimball school, one of the several still employing the wooden structures.

The pupils now occupying the portables at Kimball will be placed on a part-time basis in the main building until a new structure is made available. Portables at the Eliot Junior High School and at Armstrong High School are to be discontinued as soon as arrangements can be made for the classes now using them, it was announced.

Approved by the Board also was a proposal to equalize the enrollments of Stuart and Eliot Junior High Schools by changing the boundary lines between the two schools. The lines were moved from 13th st. ne. to 14th and from Trinidad ave to Holbrook st. It is expected this change, effective with the beginning of the new semester, will alleviate crowded conditions at Eliot.

Action on a proposal to lift the ban on unsupervised high school sororities and fraternities was postponed pending a report of the opinion of principals and teachers of the various high schools.

The board also delayed action on the request of the Commissioners that it assume direction of day care and nursery centers in the District. The members declined to discuss supervision of the centers until it had sufficient time to study proposed changes. However, it was agreed Superintendent of Schools Robert L. Haycock proceed with plans to reorganize the administration of the projects.

Tabled was a recommendation that the board amend its regulations to forbid personal solicitation of funds from school employes. The amendment which will be voted on following a report of Superintendent Haycock, provides that funds can be collected only through the placing of a container in a suitable location in the school where anonymous contributions can be made.

Groups to Meet To Counteract Delinquency

Moving toward a "concerted effort" to combat juvenile delinquency in the District, meetings in the southwest and northeast sections of Washington will be held this and next week to launch programs of neighborhood participation.

Staff members of the National Training School for Boys will join the Langdon School Parent-Teacher Association meeting tonight at 8 o'clock to discuss the training school's role in controlling the problem. Citizens in this northeast area will participate in the discussions.

On a broader participation basis is the program of Randall Junior High's advisory committee on juvenile activities, which, during the week of January 9, begins its activities through churches in the community.

Ministers in that area will discuss with their congregations aspects of the situation affecting member families. Young people will join the community-wide program with an interscholastic forum in Randall auditorium on Monday, January 10.

Activities scheduled at Randall School for the remainder of next week include a panel discussion by the P-TA on community agencies contributing to control of juvenile delinquency; health examinations and chest X-rays for students, at the Southwest Health Center; and opening of a school door canteen on Friday night, from 7:30 to 10:30 o'clock.

Three Pedestrians, Bicyclist Hurt in Traffic Accidents

Three pedestrians and a young bicyclist were injured in traffic accidents here yesterday during the rain.

George A. Symes, 72, of 115 Tennessee ave, ne., suffered a possible broken leg and head injuries when struck by a taxi at 13th and F sts. nw. He was treated at Emergency Hospital. Police said the taxi was driven by Roosevelt A. Anderson, 38, of 1113 6th st. nw.

Donald White, 55, of 1512 Corcoran st. nw. was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for a broken arm and head injuries when struck by a car operated, police said, by Robert W. Courtney, 12 N st. ne., in the 1600 block 15th st. nw.

Emma P. Williams, 56, of 2517 P st. nw., received severe leg injuries when hit by a car driven by Leon Bezdikin, 43, of 3023 O st. nw. in the 3100 block of M st. nw., according to police. She was removed to Georgetown Hospital.

Vincent Leroy, 13, of 7929 West Beach dr. nw., drove his bicycle into the rear of a truck at 16th st. and Kalmia rd. nw., police said, and suffered a broken leg and injuries to his shoulder and head. He was treated at Freedman's Hospital.

Dies Committee Upheld in Power To Demand Replies

Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher of District Court yesterday upheld the power of the Dies Committee Investigating Un-American Activities to demand that witnesses answer questions.

Justice Eicher sustained an indictment against five admitted Communists who refused to answer questions in March, 1940.

Service Foot Clinic Opens

FOR THOSE TIRED FEET—Pretty Delores Kohler, seaman 2d, class of the WAVES was one of the first to receive treatment for her tired, weary feet at the new foot clinic opened for servicemen and women last night at the United Nations Center, 500 North Capitol st. The clinic is operated by members of the Podiatry Society and will be open daily from 7:30 p. m. to 9 p. m., Sundays from 10 a. m. till noon. With Seaman Kohler are shown Photographers Mate James F. White and Dr. A. M. Steinberg of the Podaitry Society

American College of Surgeons Approves Gallinger Hospital

Gallinger Hospital, whose superintendent, Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, resigned December 15, following exposures by a Senate investigating committee, was listed yesterday among 18 District hospitals given full or provisional approval in 1943 by the American College of Surgeons.

The hospital was approved in all respects by the college in releasing results of a national survey which approved a total of 3253 institutions.

Gallinger was approved for graduate training in surgery, intern training and residencies and fellowships by the Council of Medical Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association, the report said.

In explaining the action of Dr. Malcolm T. MacEachern, Associate Director of the College at Chicago, said:

"Patients are assured of good care in an approved hospital because such an institution meets fundamental requirements."

These, he said, "stipulate a modern, well-operated physical plant, adequate diagnostic and therapeutic facilities under competent medical supervision . . . and a scientific spirit allied with humanitarianism to assure the greatest possible medical and nursing aid to each patient."

Full approval was also given to Central Dispensary and Emergency Hospital; Freedmen's, Georgetown University and Providence Hospitals.

Partial approval went to Children's, Columbia Hospital for Women, Doctors Hospital, Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat, Garfield Memorial, George Washington, St. Elizabeth's, Sibley Memorial, Veterans Administration Hospital, and Washington Sanitarium.

Most of the partially approved were listed either for intern training or for fellowships, or both.

Three District hospitals were provisionally approved. They are: Eastern Dispensary and Casualty, National Homeapathic, and U. S. Soldiers' Home.

'Gas' Black Mart Could Power Bomber Fleet, OPA Man Says

Enough gasoline coupons are being sold on the black market along the East Coast to power a large fleet of bombers from this country to Berlin and back, Herbert Conklin, regional OPA investigator, told reporters yesterday in Municipal Court.

The statement came after three men were held for a hearing January 15 in Municipal Court on charges of conspiring to violate the Second War Powers Act in what police said was an interstate ring which tried to sell here gas ration coupons worth 10,000 gallons.

The defendants, all Negroes, were Benjamin Lewis, 20; Andrew Jackson, 43, both of 1332 Union st. sw., and Major Witchell, 34, of 1244 Union st. sw. They pleaded not guilty and were held under $1500 bond by Judge Thomas D. Quinn.

Similar charges against James C. McDaniels, Negro, 23, of 1385 Florida ave. ne., were dropped by the U. S. attorney's office.

According to police, Lewis and Witchell attempted to sell the gas stamps to Samuel W. Kessler, filling station owner at 3279 M st. nw. They said Kessler notified police, who arrested them on Tuesday. Detective Joseph Loughrin and OPA investigators were on hand, it was said, when Kessler gave the men four marked $5 bills and by prearrangement said he was going to the bank to get additional money.

Police Instructed to Stop OPA Ration-Book Delivery

Acting contrary to the specific order of Asst. Supt. Harvey G. Callahan that police officers were neither to call for nor deliver OPA ration books which are stored in the precinct stations every night several scout car policemen have nevertheless performed this service daily for some of the ration boards, it was learned yesterday.

Inspector Callahan said last night that he did not know who had been giving them instructions to pick up the books at night and return them next morning, but that he would see that it was stopped.

The OPA, apprehensive at the large number of thefts from ration boards, went to the police several months ago and asked that the books be kept in the station houses at night, he said. At the time it also was asked that scout cars pick up and return the books.

Inspector Callahan said he refused the OPA this service, however, explaining to them that the scout cars would be tied up at the most active time of day, that the police department could not afford the gasoline and rubber, and that the police officers could not take responsibility for the books.

Inspector Callahan last night dispatched a message over the police radio instructing scout cars "not to handle any ration books." The books will be kept at the precinct stations, however, if OPA arranges for their delivery, he said.

Decision Withheld in Tenant Case

Nine tenants of three apartment houses came into Landlord-Tenant Court yesterday to fight a suit which seeks the eviction of 111 persons in order that the buildings may be converted into small units for war workers.

Judge John P. McMahon took the case under advisement. The action was brought by the Fidelity Mortgage Investment Co. and Edward C. Baltz, owner of the 18 apartments at 2618, 2620 and 2622 13th st. nw.

Baltz testified that under the proposed National Housing Administration remodeling plan he would receive $4000 a year above taxes while under present operations he was not realizing a profit.

The tenants state they are war-workers also and that the remodeling plan is a scheme to subvert rent control regulations.

Baltz testified he had obtained promises from several real estate firms that they would obtain housing for the tenants.

Zoning Board Hears Plea on Housing Job

Demands for rezoning of the Congress Heights area as an "A-semi-restricted" zone were presented in a petition to the District Zoning Commission yesterday as a preliminary to hearings today involving constructon of a large-scale housing project for Negro families.

Opposed by the construction firm of Smith & Gottlieb, which secured priorities and purchased land for the project in the Congress Heights section, and by civic groups concerned with Negro housing shortages, the petition seeks to restrict new building to small, detached or semi-detached homes.

The area has been zoned for apartment building for the past 20 years, but J. Louis Gelbman, representing, he said, both white and colored home owners, said that apartment dwellers would not take sufficient interest in maintaining the community.

Similar claims in a petition last fall blocked construction by the National Capital Housing Authority of a 300-unit project in the same neighborhood, it was stated. About 2500 residents had given their signatures at that time, Gelbman asserted.

'No Racial Issued' Wanted

He then denied an implication by Robert E. Lynch, counsel for two land owners in the area, that opposition to apartment buildings was based on objections to Negro housing there.

Commissioners Guy Mason and Charles W. Kutz interrupted the verbal exchange to declare, "We don't want any racial issues."

The Zoning Commission also heard protests against proposed regulation amendments to permit building of court groups of houses in those areas zoned for apartment, flat and tenement construction.

Defending the amendments, John Ihlder, NCHA executive officer, told the commission that they would effect more economical low-rent housing, since garden, or U-shaped home groupings would require fewer water, sewer and heating facilities.

Each Permit On Its Merits

Consideration of each permit for this type of building on its merits was recommended to the commission by the zoning advisory council.

The Home Builders' Association added support of court-type construction, as did the Washington Real Estate Board and the D. C. Chapter of the Institute of Architects. James C. Wilkes, representing all three, pointed out, however, that any new regulation should also give the zoning board leeway to approve garden-type dwellings in A (detached home) areas.

The Southeast Council, whose opposition to the amendment proposals was voiced by Lyle Fletcher, was granted a week to work out suggestions of its own.

Yesterday's session was partially devoted to suggested changes—opposed by the advisory council—of commercial zones in the interest of residents of Naylor Gardens, Knox Hill, Good Hope Hills, Buena Vista and Alabama Gardens. Present commercial areas in those sections are about a mile away on sharply graded roads.

Further discussion on the Congress Heights rezoning proposal will be heard today at 10 a. m. A similar plea, involving a multiple housing project for Negroes in Bradbury Heights, is expected to come before the commission at a later date.

Army Studies New Method For Physicals

Expansion of the medical examination facilities at the Fort Myer and other induction centers are contemplated in speculation on the effects of preinduction examinations, specified by Congress in passage of the last father draft bill.

The preinduction examinations probably will eliminate the present screening tests, given to 1-A registrants to determine whether they are outwardly fit for military service before they are ordered to appear for induction. The screening tests are given at hospitals by local physicians.

Such tests have already been abandoned in the cases of registrants placed in 1-A after they have moved out of the jurisdiction of the boards with which they registered.

Under the new set up, a registrant, upon being placed in 1-A, probably will be given an opportunity to submit to a complete physical examination at an induction center. This will eliminate the registrant's uncertainty as to whether or not he will be selected after he reports for actual induction.

Huff, McReynolds to Appear Before Jail Investigators

Ray L. Huff, superintendent of District penal institutions, and Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare, will appear tomorrow before a three-man commissioners' committee investigating the District Jail.

Meanwhile, Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee, expressed pleasure at the action of the Commissioners in appointing the committee and said last night he did not believe a parallel congressional inquiry is warranted.

The committee, all Washington businessmen—Leo A. Rover, attorney and former District Attorney; Dr. Luther Reichelderfer, former District Commissioner and Bruce Baird, president of the National Savings & Trust Co.—revealed yesterday it has requested the two officials to meet with them at 4 p. m.

"We have invited Mr. Huff and Mr. McReynolds to meet with us," a spokesman for the committee reported, "for the purpose of reviewing what the two of them have done thus far in checking conditions at the jail."

The meeting will be held at the office of one of the committeemen "rather than at the Board of Public Welfare," it was said, and will be closed.

Investigation of the jail was ordered after an inmate, Frank S. Fowler, charged that Orman Ewing, former Democratic committeeman from Utah, was shown favoritism by officials.

Though Ray Huff was named a defendant in a joint injunction and damage suit, filed by Fowler, Commissioner Guy Mason appointed him to probe Fowler's charges. A few days later the Commissioners' committee was named.

It is expected that Huff and McReynolds will open to the committee all records of the Board of Public Welfare and penal institutions and will be allowed to interview prisoners.

Representative Randolph said:

"I believe the citizens committee will do a thorough job. It is made up of three men of outstanding ability, who have the confidence of the public, whose findings no doubt will be respected."

The Congressman added that he thought the Commissioners had taken the proper course with respect to complaints about conditions at the jail, and not waited for busy members of Congress to make the probe. He further asserted he had no intention at this time of asking his committee to look into the jail situation.

City News in Brief

Thieves Loot 3 Boats

Three cabin cruisers, two of them docked at the Capital Yacht Club, 11th st. and Maine ave. sw., and the other at Columbia Yacht Club, M st. and Maine ave. sw., were entered by thieves Tuesday, police reported yesterday.

Jewelry valued at $327, including a diamond ring worth $250, was removed from the Condorth II, Earl Rogers, a resident on the boat, reported. From the Dolphin, whisky and several miscellaneous articles, and 10 packages of razor blades were missing. William Barker valued the property at $55. Mrs. Uyley Anderson reported the Lazy Lady was ransacked, but apparently nothing was stolen.

Taxi Reciprocation

A reciprocal agreement between Washington and Virginia to allow taxicabs returning from delivering fares across the State line to pick up passengers was announced yesterday by F. W. Lovejoy, executive secretary of the Washington Regional Committee of Defense Transportation Administrators.

The agreement was arranged to conserve gas, tires, and manpower and is to terminate 30 days after cessation of the war. Cabs will not be expected to cruise when out of their territory or to cross the State line to answer telephone calls.

Rewarded for Idea

As a reward for a suggestion which will save time and paper, the Interior Department yesterday gave Henry F. Hill, 44, of 1635 Montague st. nw., an annual raise of $200 and an award of excellence.

Hill, with the department 21 years and now assistant to the chief hydraulic engineer, water resources branch, Geological Survey, suggested a better procedure for handling corerspondence.

Exit Pass Required

The rule that people entering or leaving the new District Building must have a pass or badge goes for newspaper men, too, the building guards let it be known yesterday.

A reporter who left his press pass in the third-floor press room and started for the front door on the main floor to pick up a newspaper was accosted by a guard. After considerable discussion over his inability to produce the pass the reporter was taken to the office of the building superintendent. Other reporters finally came to his rescue, identified him and finally he was in again.

Honors for Teacher

Helen M. Coolidge, assistant principal at Central High School for 27 years until her retirement recently, will be honored at 2:30 p.m. today in the high school auditorium by the Central Alumni Association.

Others to receive awards are Brig. Gen. Charles D. Young (retired), class of 1898, deputy director of Defense Transportation; William H. Collings, 1911, vice president of Bethlehem Steel Co.; Brice Clagett, 1908, District Municipal Court judge, and Comdr. William C. Butler, jr., 1925, USN.

Indictment Sustained

An indictment against Carl G. E. Orgell, charging him with failing to register properly as an agent of the German government, was sustained yesterday by Chief Justice Eicher of District Court. He ruled the Secretary of State is empowered by the foreign agents statute to set up the requirements for registration.

Two Icemen Held

One of two ice men held in connection with the theft of $2020 worth of whisky from a downtown cafe was identified yesterday as a former member of the notorious "blackface gang," which terrorized merchants in a series of holdups here during 1934-35.

The suspect, Joseph Edward Fitzpatrick, 33, of 317 10 st. se., was seized with Thomas Francis Burke, 28, of Seat Pleasant, Md., Tuesday, and charged with the theft of whisky from Carroll's Tavern, 519 9th st. nw. Both were held for the grand jury under $1500 bail each.

Fitzpatrick served five years in the penitentiary starting in October, 1935, for participation in a series of holdups.

He, with Morris Beck, blackened their faces to look like Negroes during a series of daring robberies. Beck was shot and killed in a Bladensburg restaurant October 14, 1935, during a holdup.

WMC Needs Aide

The manpower shortage has boiled over into the War Manpower Commission itself, it was revealed yesterday, in an announcement by U. S. Civil Service Commission that it sought to fill a $4428 a year job, entitled "Manpower Utilization Director."

The job waits for applicants. He who gets it will serve the Fourth Region, embracing Maryland, North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, the Commission stated. The salary includes overtime.

AWOL Pig Impounded

This little pig never went to market—he landed in the District pound instead.

Some 40 pounds of fresh pork, a small black fugitive from ration books was sighted yesterday by workmen on a construction job for the District of Columbia Sewer Department, at South Capitol st. and Firth Sterling ave. se. They tied a rope to the porker's leg, notified police, and saw him trotted off to the District pound, where he awaits his owner.

American U. Dance

The manpower shortage has few worries for guests at American University's inter-fraternity dance Saturday at the Roger Smith Hotel, for the committee has obtained priorities on the volunteer escort services of men attending the Army specialized training program at Georgetown University. Organizations sponsoring the affair are fraternities Alpha Tau Omega and Phi Sigma Kappa, and sororities Kappa Delta, Alpha Chi Omega, Phi Mu and Delta Gamma.

OPA Acts Against Store

In the first action of its kind here, the Office of Price Administration asked District Court yesterday to prevent the Philip Franks Jewelry Co., at 812 F st. nw. from selling any price-controlled items until its records are brought up to date. The OPA also asked an injunction to prevent future sales of items at above-ceiling prices.

In a suit filed by OPA attorneys, John L. Laskey, Carl W. Berueffy and J. Grahame Walker, the court is told that during October the store sold cigarette lighters at over-ceiling prices.

Valentines Appear

Valentine's Day has moved in right on top of New Year's.

Before "Happy New Year" disappeared from store windows Valentines for February 14 were on display yesterday. Cupid went on a full work week to meet the battlefront mail schedules. Lace hearts already are on their way to the South Pacific and the Italian front.

Justice Dept. Donors

Ten donors from the lands division of the Department of Justice, led by Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Norman L. Littell, will give their blood at the District Red Cross Blood Donor Center, 51 Louisiana ave. nw., at 11 a. m. Saturday.

D. C. Revenue Unaffected By New Line

By James E. Chinn

Attorney General Biddle has assured Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee there would be no loss to the District in tax revenue if a new District-Virginia boundary is fixed as proposed in his bill now awaiting House approval, it was disclosed last night in a supplemental report on the measure.

Two District officials—Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent and Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech—also have given similar assurances.

Views of the Attorney General and District officials were sought by Randolph as a result of questions raised on the House floor last November 30, when futile efforts were made to get action on the bill.

Century Old Dispute

Designed to settle a century old jurisdictional controversy over the area bordering the Virginia side of the Potomac River, the measure would fix the boundary line in general at the present mean high water mark, instead of the high water mark as it existed when the District of Columbia was created in 1791.

The strips of land lying between the boundary line of 1791 and the proposed new boundary are largely owned by the U. S. Government and include the huge Pentagon Building, the Washington National Airport and part of the George Washington Memorial Parkway.

"The exact area which would be ceded to the State of Virginia under section 102 of the bill is uncertain because the mean high water mark as it existed January 24, 1791, the present boundary line, has never been determined to the satisfaction of the State of Virginia or the United States," Biddle wrote Randolph.

Never Taxed Property

However, it is understood that because of the uncertainty with respect to this line the District of Columbia has not at any time attempted to tax any property beyond the actual high water mark on the Virginia shore. For this reason the enactment of the present bill would not have any effect upon the present tax revenues from the District of Columbia.

"It may also be pointed out that while the extent of privately owned lands between the present mean high water mark on the Virginia shore and the 1791 line is uncertain a considerable part of the area is now owned by the United States."

Tax Assessor Dent said any potential loss in revenue would be "inconsequental" and probably would be more than off-set by the cost to the District of administration and policing the area that would be placed in Virginia.

D. C. Insurance Laws Studied By O'Mahoney

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming, a champion of lower fire insurance rates, announced last night he had undertaken a study to find out whether some "public authority" in the District is not now vested with the power to regulate and control rates here.

He cited from a record of fire insurance by States, published by the Weekly Underwriter, figures showing that of all the States, Territories and the District, only Hawaii had a lower average loss per $100 of insurance than the District, in the period between 1931 and 1940. The losses here per $100 of insurance during those years were placed at 10 cents per $100 of insurance. With an average rate of premiums at 43 cents per $100, this was said to represent a loss of 24½ per cent paid in premiums.

"The situation in the District is typical of that in the States," Senator O'Mahoney declared. "Before I do anything about it I want to be sure there is no public authority here to review the rates."

The Commissioners apparently were unable to find any law giving the superintendent of insurance control over rates of insurance against loss by fire, lightning, tornado and windstorm and had Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee sponsor a bill to provide a method whereby "reasonable" rates may be established through a rating bureau under supervision of the insurance superintendent. This proposed legislation is awaiting Senate approval.

According to Commissioner John Russell Young, established rates are arrived at by "arbitrary and discriminatory methods" by the various companies authorized to write fire insurance in the District.

'Give-Out' Ruling Seen as Preview Of 'Esquire' Case

A preview to the Esquire magazine case ended abruptly yesterday when Justice T. Allan Goldsborough declined to sign an injunction to restrain the Postmaster General taking away second class mail privileges from a magazine called "Give Out" which also has pictures of pretty girls and songs as well.

Justice Goldsborough was unimpressed by argument of counsel for the magazine that the freedom of the press was at stake. He said that the right of the Postmaster General to control matter traveling through the mails has been upheld by the United States Supreme Court and that was sufficient.

He ruled the Postmaster General was within his legal rights in denying second class privileges to the sound book advertised for servicemen and containing versions of songs, patriotic and sentimental.

Ration Books Need Addresses

Hundreds of lost ration books dropped in the mails by the finders are being sent to the dead letter office every month because the owners failed to fill in their addresses on the covers, according to OPA.

Because of lack of addresses or incorrect ones, more than 800 lost books could not be forwarded to their owners by the Postoffice Department in the last two months.

Through the cooperation of the Postoffice authorities, lost ration books deposited in the mails are forwarded to the owners whenever they can be located.

Every holder of a ration book, OPA urges, should make certain that his current address is plainly written in the space provided for that purpose on the cover.

Adequate Diet With Proteins Seen Safe Way to Reduce

This is the third in a series of articles by Ida Jean Kain to help you get in trim. In addition to today's menu pattern, she'll give you many other helpful suggestions during the next three weeks.

By Ida Jean Kain

If you are like almost every other overweight, you love to eat. That's fine! You get more fun out of life when you enjoy good food. Keep right on liking your three meals a day, but make a change in your food pattern. Cut your calories to fit your figure.

You don't have to give up eating to get your weight down. Just don't overlook the science of reducing. The fastest and safest way to reduce is to keep your diet adequate in all nutrients and step up the protein. Which breakfast would you choose as best for reducing: (1) a sweet roll or toast and coffee; (2) none at all; (3) a citrus fruit, a soft-boiled egg, toast (slice it thin), and clear coffee? The last is the best.

When you skip breakfast, you are very apt to overeat at lunch—or, at least, at dinner. The sweet rolls and coffee gives you starch and stimulation and 300 calories without vitamins. The third breakfast is balanced for a mere 225 calories and furnishes vitamins, minerals and protein.

Protein is something you ought to know about and make sure you get. It not only stays by you, but actually helps you to burn calories at a faster rate. It speeds up our metabolism. Protein has what is called a specific dynamic action, and that is why it lets you burn the calories faster. When you can be well fed and burn calories faster, why go without food and take it out of your health?

The right food pattern includes optimal amounts of the protective nutrients and keeps things running smoothly. If you are overweight, that pattern contains fewer calories than you use, so you lose the excess pounds.

Here is a menu pattern for you to follow for reducing until your weight is normal and thereafter as basic fare. You may then add calories to the point where your weight stays normal.

Metals Back; Wood, Paper Scarce Now

By Elizabeth M. Boykin

A year ago it was aluminum, cork and steel that were scarce and too precious for civilians to share. Now they're more plentiful and are once more being used for consumer goods. The shortages now include wood, paper, cardboard and leather, things that last year were replacing the aluminum, cork and steel.

This shortage of wood focuses attention on the many developments in this material which the war has spotlighted. Seems that many so-called new uses of wood are really very old. The first clocks had wood gears, and the first mills had wooden wheels, for example. Wooden gutters are old ideas, too, as are wood pipes. Wooden propellers for airplanes recall that the first planes ever made had wooden propellers.

Old-Time Wood Articles

We wore wooden shoes long before leather was thought of for the purpose. Wood bathtubs, promised with glamour after the war, hark back to the first bathtubs. Wood washtubs and buckets recall old ones. Wooden plumbing pipes of today differ from old ones in that they are no longer made of a log with a hole bored in it, but of molded veneers put together with plastic bonding.

That goes for most wood products of today. Plastic bonding agents make it possible for thinner, stronger wood to do a job that once required a thick piece. Really new things being made of wood include typewriter frames, bottle caps, umbrella frames, fluorescent lighting reflectors.

New Cabinet Materials

With war needs creating this scarcity of wood, there'll be lots more variety in cabinet woods with less familiar types turning up. Mahogany, walnut, maple and oak have always been the big four in American furniture, with cherry, birch and beech used importantly if less conspicuously.

Gum is a fine durable wood that has been widely shown, stained to make it look like other woods. It is also used for the structural parts of veneers. Sycamore, hackberry, elm, hickory, satinwood are other hardwoods adapted for furniture. Pine is a soft wood, but it is easy to work and light in weight and color. It has always been especially popular for painted furniture.

With new methods of treating wood with plastic coatings, it is predicted that soft woods will, after the war, be given more enduring surfaces that will make them as practical as hard wood.

Four Young People's Groups, for Different Ages, In Chevy Chase Church, Are Termed by Member: 'Friendliest and Most Inspiring I've Ever Found'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: On December 28 there appeared in your column a letter from "Jane," a girl 19, a former honor student in college, nice looking and well dressed, who finds herself such a social flop and so lonely in Washington that she says she would commit suicide if she had the courage. You advised her to get psychiatric help in overcoming her "thoroughly defeatist attitude toward self", and, in the meantime, to read Emmet Fox's book, "Power Through Constructive Thinking," and open her mind wide to its inspired teachings on how to claim happiness.

Both recommendations are right, I am sure; and I want merely to add one more suggestion to your prescription. I belong to a church in Chevy Chase, which has four very active young people's groups,—for Junior High, Senior High, College-Age and Young Adults. All four groups are the friendliest and most inspiring groups of the type I have found anywhere. There is ample work connected with these groups to consume all the spare time of any interested member; and I have never heard anyone complain for lack of fun to be had at the many parties and dances given at the various members' homes, or in the church assembly room. So you see, the church forms a community for all who wish to become part of it.

All the groups welcome anyone who wants to share in the fellowship, regardless of denomination. There are many active members who came recently, knowing no one; and now are as much a part of the organization as the members who have attended for years. Jane would be interested in the college-age group, of course. And this is probably the coziest group of the four, being the smallest,—due to the fact that many of its members are now away in school or in the armed forces. However, it has a regular attendance of about 30 active members, who meet every Sunday evening in the living room of the church house,—which contains the minister's offices. Jane would be immediately made to feel at home; and I will be glad to take her in charge and introduce her around, if she will just get in touch with me, through you, Miss Haworth. (I am giving you my name and telephone number, in case she calls.)

Learn to Like Yourself And Popularity Follows

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The purpose of this letter is to prove that you were correct in telling Jane that her wallflower trouble stems from a defeatist attitude toward self. I am 18 and I have experienced the same heartbreak that Jane has. First, let me tell you about myself. I am 5 feet 7 inches tall, which is considered pretty tall for a girl. Also, I am big-boned and a bit overweight. I spent my entire high school years without dates. All my girl friends would talk about their dates, while I had to sit silent. I, too, got a low opinion of myself and felt that I was doomed to be the lonely, unloved spinster type.

I was told by everyone that I had a grand personality; that I was a swell sport and very entertaining. Boys and girls alike were very nice to me. BUT—boys never dated me. I couldn't understand why. Many girls less attractive than I had plenty of dates and fun. Probably the thing that saved me was a really swell girl friend, who came to my rescue. She was quite popular and today is married to a wonderful man. Being older than I, she knew more about life. She told me that if I didn't think I was good and had sex appeal,—why on earth would anyone else think so!

She Won Man's Heart By 'Acting Natural'

I WENT to work on myself. The first thing I did was to fix my hair differently, lose some weight and get new clothes. This not only made an outward change; but an inward change, too. I no longer felt that people were staring critically at me. I began to like myself; and my personality, self-confidence and friendships grew apace. Today, I am just an average-looking girl. I wouldn't stand out in a crowd; but I couldn't ask for any more happiness or friends. I have all the dates I want, and some day soon I expect to marry a boy who is now in the service.

Jane should realize she doesn't have to be "Sunday best" all the time. The boy who is now my fiance first saw me at a picnic, when I had on an old skirt and blouse and a shapeless jacket. My hair was messed up and I wore practically no make-up. Dressed in this manner, I was natural. I said and did what I wanted to; and because I wasn't trying to impress anyone, I made many friends at that one party. Therefore, I repeat: BE NATURAL, Jane; and make friends with some nice girl. The rest will follow. Take this from one who knows; one who has learned the hard way how to be popular; and from the best teacher,—experience.

Guest Quiz

By Grace Martin
Associated Press Feature Writer

What is your rating as a guest? You can find out soon enough by scoring yourself on these questions.

1. Do you arrive on time—or do you come straggling in half an hour late, leaning lamely on that old excuse about not being able to get away from the office?

2. Once you have arrived, do you just sit like a stone, letting other people amuse you, or do you contribute something to the fun once in a while?

3. Where do you put your cigarette ashes—on the tray or on the floor?

4. Can you be pleasant to the party bore for a few minutes without wearing a martyred expression?

5. Are you one of the interrupters—or do you let other people finish their sentences?

6. Do you tell your hostess how good the mashed potatoes were—or do you go in and out as though you were in a restaurant?

7. Do you collect your belongings when you leave—or do you strew rubbers and mufflers behind you?

If you can make the right answers to all of those questions, you are a welcome guest. If you score right on five, you are fair; but if you fall below four you are due for a reform.

Hope for Control of Common Cold Gained From Successful Experiments

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Attempts to prevent colds and respiratory infections by any kind of vaccines or inoculation of the individual have proved miserable failures. Some of the worst kinds of blunderings go masked under the smiling face of optimism.

I regularly read in trade magazines published by drug firms whose business it is to sell oral cold vaccine and other kinds of cold vaccines that "pessimism characterizes the attitude of many as to preventing the common cold."

That is not pessimism. It is realism; facing the fact that these methods are miserable failures. The kind of optimism presumably recommended would mulct the public of millions of dollars for perfectly worthless, and time-consuming methods of prevention.

There is a form of prevention of colds and respiratory affections limited in scope which, however, promises some hope. And it serves a very important field and purpose.

Epidemics in Wards

One of the serious possibilities of these epidemics is when they hit a schoolroom or a hospital ward full of children.

One of the definitely known facts about colds is that they are airborne, spread by coughing and sneezing. When one child gets a cold it is very likely to go through the whole classroom or ward. In the ward some of the children may be in splints or in braces, which situation reduces their chances of throwing the infection off.

We used to hang up sheets between every bed in an influenza ward to prevent cross-infection, but that did little good.

The latest device is to use a sterilizing vapor of propylene glycol. This substance was developed by research in order to find a chemical vapor that would do no harm to the mucous membrane of human beings, but would destroy or mobilize the organism which causes the common cold.

Vaporized Glycol

In a hospital ward or schoolroom the propylene glycol is vaporized by heat from a small radio resistance unit and wafted through the rooms by electric fans. Units of this type—vaporization apparatus and electric fan—are arranged on stands at the midpoint of the end walls of the room, about 3 feet from the ceiling.

Methods of measuring the concentration of the vapor have been perfected. It stays in the air a long time, half of it being present an hour after the vaporization had been stopped.

The results as shown in a children's hospital in Philadelphia and one in Atlantic City are quite encouraging.

The reduction of common colds from 79 (in the rooms where there was no vaporization) to 3 (in the rooms where vaporization was in force) is a strong argument in favor of the method.

The Gentler Sex

Tomorrow's Dream Home

(Declaration of independence of a woman who has just gone through two housecleanings, one for the Christmas company, and one of the after-the-holidays mess).

Bring on, Postwar World, anything and everything you have in the way of a house that can be cleaned by means of a spigot and a hose.

Turn my home into a hospital ward, a chemical laboratory a modernistic monstrosity of glass and black chromium—anything on earth that will free me from this eternal slavery of chasing dust, grime and fuzz.

Bring on your washable draperies and rugs, stock me up with your synthetic blankets, tablecloths, napkins that can when soiled be thrown in the trash can to be burned; move in your plain, functional furniture that doesn't have any corners in which dust can collect and that, above all, doesn't need any furniture polish.

Bring on your plastic knives and forks, trays and tea services that will prevent silver polishing from taking all the joy out of hospitality.

Bring on your electric garbage grinder, and get the revolting garbage can forever out of my sight; bring on your plastic dishes and pans and the autoclave that redigests them and sends them out of a slot cleaned and remolded so that I will be spared for the rest of my life the sight of another dish mop, stack of dirty dishes, or a greasy pot.

Bring on your electronic controls for opening doors, and eliminate the prints of grimy fingers on my woodwork; put in the floors that won't require any waxing, oiling or dirty floor cloths and mops stuck in corners.

Bring on your heating fibers woven into the drapery fabrics and tear out my sputtering leaky radiators with the convoluting dust-catching pipes.

Bring on—and be quick about it—your air conditioning filters and your electrical plates to trap fine dust particles and banish forever that hideous, insanitary domestic nightmare, the dust cloth.

Bring on anything that will free me from being a sycophant to maids, or valet and nurse to rugs, floors, furniture—all my mute tyrannical associates that are constantly demanding or reproaching.

Come on Salvation Army, junk man, anybody, and take away all these anachronisms that fetter me to the past and enslave my body and mind—and by all means come quickly before someone comes in and tells me of unearthing in an attic some fine old pewter or an ancient brass lamp, or of discovering a new little antique shop where there is a charming old rosewood table with a carved gallery, or a whatnot with curleycues.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Egg yolk is so valuable an addition to the diet of the baby, beginning at about 3 or 4 months, that it is essential for the mother to understand why egg is given and in what form it may be served.

The whole egg is not advised, chiefly because the white of egg is a complete protein. When the baby takes all the milk he needs, too much additional protein might sensitize him to protein.

High in Iron Content

Egg yolk is high in iron and, from about the sixth month or so after birth, baby's prenatal supply of iron is exhausted. It is wise, therefore, to begin to provide more through the diet. Egg yolk provides other vitamins, minerals and protein as well.

Some babies react badly to egg in any form and for them egg will have to be omitted from the diet. No child profits by taking a food which results in vomiting, fever, rash, swelling around the mouth or any other evidences of digestive disturbance.

For those who can take it, one of the nice ways to serve the egg yolk is to boil it hard, mash it smooth with some of baby's formula and offer one teaspoonful of this mixture. This is enough for several days.

Then try two teaspoons, and so on, until the baby can take the whole yolk daily. At this time, or previously, it is also possible to press the yolk through a sieve and sprinkle it over the vegetable, thus making a combination egg and vegetable dish.

May Be Added to Formula

The yolk may be added to the formula, too. Stir the uncooked yolk with part of the cold milk, then mix it into the rest of the milk which is put in the top of a double boiler. Cook over hot water until the egg is thickened, then strain into the additional water and sugar called for in the formula. Divide it into the proper number of feeding bottles and store on ice until ready to feed.

Babies like soft custards, too, to be eaten with the noon or night meal. One egg yolk, 1 cup of milk and one teaspoon of sugar stirred together and cooked over hot water makes a smooth, thin custard which baby will eat from a spoon. It may be served hot or cold. Half of this makes a good portion for one meal.

For our leaflet, "Teaching Use of Cup and Spoon," write to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of The Washington Post, inclosing a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope.

U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps Nears End of Drive

By Martha Rhyne

The weeks are waning in the drive for recruits for the infant organization of mercy, the United States Cadet Nurses Corps, which has driven forth in militant strides since last summer. Author of the bill which appropriated funds for girls to go into nurses' training in accredited nurses' schools, under the administration of United States Public Health Service, was Ohio's Representative Frances Bolton.

As a young girl, Mrs. Bolton became interested in nursing as a useful occupation to humanity; this interest she backed very solidly with a $2,500,000 endowment to the Frances P. Bolton School of Nursing at Ohio's Western Reserve University.

Created to provide for the training of nurses for the armed forces, Government and civilian hospitals, health agencies, and war industries, the corps, inspired by Mrs. Bolton's bill, will furnish students study, training, uniform, insignia, and maintenance for a 2½-year period. National recruiting has progressed since September, but is 37% short of its goal. The drive will end in February. The District of Columbia, high on the list of successful campaign areas, has a goal of 565 cadet nurses, has obtained all but 110 of these. Good health, graduation with satisfactory grades from an accredited high school age between 17 and 35, will qualify an application to a nursing school cooperating with the corps.

Cooperating with the program are Miss Edith M. Beattie and Mrs. Elizabeth Coleman, members of the staff at the Graduate Nurses Registry, who are acting as counsel for recruits, as sponsors for recruitment. All races and creeds are needed.

A wounded soldier needs a nurse's care. A nation which has through the years pointed with pride to the strength and courage of its women cannot ignore the pressing need for more and more nurses. For scattered to the four corners of the earth are our modern Florence Nightingales stripped of mental froth, joining the Medical Corps in living a service-above-self life.

Back home, however, 1 in 2 sick beds is occupied by a mental patient. Hospitals are overcrowded, trained nurses by the hundreds have joined the armed services; those who have remained are shorthanded, overworked, and handicapped with the lack of facilities typical of wartime. But the care of the sick must, and has, gone on. It is an ideal of our country.

A nurse's training is a serious business, but need not be interpreted as grim. The two-piece suit of gray wool contrasted by regimental red epaulets, silver insignia buttons, and the Cadet Nurse sleeve insignia, a silver Maltese Cross on a red ground, was designed especially for the cadet nurse. A cocky Montgomery beret matches the uniform. Carefully selected, with quality still the chief requisite, a cadet nurse must be alert, orderly and neat in mind and dress, cheerful, interested in people. For as a nurse she will belong to humanity.

Junior League Will Hear Talks On Legislation

The Junior League of Washington will break with tradition tomorrow when its members meet to discuss legislation now before Congress affecting the District government. Mrs. Eugene Duffield, president of the District of Columbia League of Women Voters; Ben McKelway, associate editor of the Evening Star, and Renah Camalier, prominent Washington attorney, will lead the discussion.

Mrs. John B. Martin, jr., Junior League legislative chairman, is in charge of the meeting.

This is the first time the league as an organization, has undertaken the study of legislative matters.

During the earlier years of its existence leaders in Junior League policy-setting felt that they should concentrate on developing a responsible, trained group to render service where it was needed in community welfare organizations. Agencies were skeptical about volunteers and the most willing volunteer was of little value until she understood what she was doing and appreciated its importance. The principal of volunteer service became well established and the desirability of broadening the educational program of the league was more and more apparent.

The Association of Junior Leagues of America changed its policy some years ago to meet this need and the Junior League of Washington is acting in accordance with this newer thinking. The league plans to give its members the opportunity to hear all points of view regardling legislation affecting the District.

Anderson—Porter

The cottage of Hampshire House in New York was the setting yesterday for the wedding of Miss Barbara Louise Porter and Lieut. Robert Earle Anderson, jr., USNR.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Marsh Porter of Cambridge, Md. Lieutenant Anderson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Anderson of Chevy Chase, Md. The wedding ceremony was performed by the Rev. John J. Moment of Plainfield, N. J.

The bride was attired in white faille with inserts of Alencon lace on the yoke and sleeves. She wore a coronet of lace and carried a bouquet of white lilacs and sweetheart roses.

Mrs. Gordon Wallace Campbell, sister of the bride, was the only attendant. She wore a gown of watermelon pink crepe. Serving as best man was Harold Smith, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and selected as ushers were Peter Bentley 3d., Lieut. Charles Wolfinger, and James B. Daly. A reception at the Hampshire Cottage followed the ceremony.

Mrs. Anderson is a graduate of the Madeira School in Washington. Her husband attended Princeton University and the Yale Law School.

Hatch—McNair

On a short wedding trip before making their home in Cleveland, Ohio, are Mr. and Mrs. William A. Hatch, whose wedding at Annapolis, Md., took place recently.

Mrs. Hatch is the former Miss Janet McNair, daughter of Captain and Mrs. McNair of Annapolis. The bridegroom is the son of Prof. and Mrs. D. Arthur Hatch of Easton, Pa. The wedding ceremony was performed at St. Andrew's Chapel with Chaplain William Thomas, USN, officiating. Only immediate members of the family attended the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, T. Marshall Duer of Baltimore. She wore a street-length dress of cream-colored wool crepe. She carried a prayer book to which was fastened gardenias.

The bride's matron of honor was her sister, Mrs. John Mason Rickabaugh, who wore a costume of dusty pink crepe. The other attendent to the bride was Miss Marshall Jupp. Best man for the ceremony was Ralf Mounce of Baltimore.

Youthful American Hostess Wins Plaudits at Embassy in Moscow; Makes Friends With Soviets in Their Own Tongue

LATEST REPORTS from Moscow have it that an American girl is making a big hit in diplomatic and service sets there. She's pretty Miss Kathleen Harriman, official hostess for her father, William Averell Harriman, U. S. Ambassador to the Soviet Union.

Miss Harriman

"She's as democratic as a Southern Congressman before election," observed an American soldier now stationed in the Russian capital. Seems her clothes, her demeanor and her very evident friendliness are decidedly to the liking of both the Russians and the "foreign colony" there.

Formerly a newspaper correspondent in London, Miss Harriman shouldered a terrific task when she agreed to serve as chatelaine of our embassy in Moscow. She's only 25, and most of her time since her graduation from Bennington College in 1940 has been devoted to journalism.

Friends who fully expected this attractive daughter of a multimillionaire to swing into a traditional social groove gasped in surprise when they heard she was seeking a newspaper job. But by the time she took off to Sun Valley, Idaho, to join the publicity staff at the resort founded by her father, they were used to the idea that the purely social routine was definitely out the window for Kathleen.

Those same friends, therefore, took it as a matter of course, when her father went to London as lend-lease administrator, and she got herself a job with a news service so she could accompany him. Later she shifted to the London bureau of a news magazine, a job she held until she resigned to go to Russia.

Bright-eyed, dark-haired and slender, Kathleen had no sooner arrived in Moscow when she settled down to a two-hour-a-day schedule of language study, and shortly thereafter began making friends with the Soviets in their own language. "She is lovely, gracious, and tireless," according to a recent report from Moscow. "And she's one of the most popular young women in the entire capital. Having an unmarried hostess at the U. S. Embassy is exactly what the Soviets and the American soldiers stationed in Moscow want . . . and like."

IN CERTAIN Leatherneck circles, the Maury Mavericks' house is rapidly becoming known as the "Marine Barracks Annex." Every weekend finds Marines filling the third floor at 1829 Jefferson pl. where the WPB executive and his wife have made their home for some time.

In other words, the Mavericks are doing a USO job all on their own; are making a lot of Marines mighty happy about it, and are also lending a hand to Cupid now and then—as this piece is designed to prove.

Seems that when young Marine Lieut. Maury Maverick, jr., was in training for duty overseas, he tossed out invitations right and left, asking fellow trainees to call at his parents' home any time they happened to be around Washington. A number of them have been "around" since then . . . and it's all to the good so far as both Mr. and Mrs. Maverick are concerned.

"We just turn over the third floor to them, and tell them where to find the door key," Mrs. Maverick told me yesterday. "We love having them with us as often and as long as possible. Next best thing to having our son at home." Lieutenant Maverick is "somewhere in the South Pacific."

One of his fellow trainees, Lieut. Conrad Pearson of the Marine Corps, is among the regulars who have been spending all spare time possible at the Maverick home. In his case, however, there's a very special reason. And her name is Miss Helen De Mott of Rye, N. Y., who has also been a fairly frequent visitor in the same home in recent months. Miss De Mott is a good friend of the 18-year-old daughter in the Maverick family, Miss Terrelita Maverick, who returned yesterday to her studies at Penn Hall. This weekend, however, she'll be back in Washington for the wedding at St. John's Church where Lieutenant Pearson and Helen De Mott will exchange vows on Saturday.

Mrs. Maverick

Miss De Mott will walk down that well-known aisle, wearing her mother's wedding dress. The ceremony, planned in haste as are most such events in wartime, will be followed by a reception at the Maverick home, and the couple will be off shortly afterward for a brief wedding trip before the bridegroom returns to his duties at Marine Barracks here. While awaiting further assignment he and his bride will make their home in Washington; but chances are, habit being a big factor in anybody's life, they'll spend a lot of time at the "Marine Barracks Annex," which is also the Maverick home.

President of Venezuela to Arrive Soon

President Gen. Isaias Medina of Venezuela will arrive in Washington January 19 to spend several days. He will be accompanied by a group of members of his Cabinet and military officials. Also expected in the party is Frank Corrigan, United States Ambassador to Venezuela.

The visit of Venezuela's chief executive, who was here several years ago when he was Minister of War, is expected to follow the usual pattern of entertainment laid out for foreign dignitaries. There will be a dinner at the White House, a dinner at which Secretary of State Cordell Hull will be host. President Isaias will visit the Capital and will attend a special session of the Board of Governors of the Pan American Union, with a luncheon following.

From Washington President Isaias will go to Philadelphia to visit Independence Hall and to attend a luncheon in his honor to be given by the mayor of the city. He will then go to New York, where he will spend about a week.

Penny Party Brings Relief to Yanks, Tommies

A serenade of white and red pennies for the British and American Seamen's Service will start falling into the collection plate again on January 14, from 3 to 5 p. m., at the home of Mrs. Alexander C. B. Symon.

The first "Penny Party" of the new year will start a vigorous and thorough campaign for aid to the men on the world's seven seas during 1944.

Mrs. Symon, inaugurator of the movement, declared in a statement to contributors that the fund during the past year had built up to a sum over $1000. She thanked all who had saved their pennies for the men.

Mrs. Symon also reported that the magazine collection for the troops in India has built up during the year to an all-high figure, and that 5825 of the total number of magazines have already been dispatched to the East.

The name "Penny Party" arose because friends of Mrs. Symon had saved their pennies for her. Now, however, the contributions come in all sizes and colors.

Wife of OWI Official Arrives With Sons From New Orleans

Mrs. George Healy, jr., wife of the new Domestic Director of the Office of War Information, and her two sons, George and Floyd, arrived in Washington Monday from New Orleans.

Mrs. Healy left her home in the colorful Louisiana city to join her husband in his new assignment to Washington. The family is now residing at 3901 Connecticut ave., and is just settling down to what Mrs. Healy describes, "as an interesting and busy time in the Nation's Capital." The wife of the former managing editor of the New Orleans Times-Picayune has been engrossed not only in getting a home in wartime Washington organized for her family but has also been thoroughly occupied establishing George, age 13, and Floyd, age 9, in the Washington schools.

While in New Orleans Mrs. Healy spent a good part of her leisure time in voluntary work with the Army Information Service. Although she would like to get into some war work here, Mrs. Healy believes that getting her family fed and taken care of under the conditions that exist in the town will just about take all her energy and time.

Sir Arthur Salter to Stay Here

Friends of Sir Arthur and Lady Salter are delighted to know that they are not returning to England, after all. Sir Arthur, who came to Washington almost three years ago as chief of the British Merchant Shipping Mission, had received orders to return to take over new and undisclosed duties in London. Instead, he will stay on to aid former Gov. Herbert Lehman during the organization period of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

Washington is home to Lady Salter. The former Mrs. Arthur Bullard, widow of a Washington writer, Lady Salter was married to Sir Arthur in London in 1940. Her home here before her marriage was at 2326 California st.

Son of a famous boat builder whose firm built the eights for the Oxford University crews, Sir Arthur Salter is a veteran shipping expert and is parliamentary secretary to the Minister of War Transport in London. He played a leading role in Allied shipping in World War I and now at the age of 61 has been in charge of maintaining a continued flow of war materials and necessities to England. He is the author of half a dozen books dealing with economic recovery and world trade and society. Since 1934 he has been Gladstone professor of political theory and institutions at Oxford University, which he represents as a member of Parliament. Sir Arthur can use the initials C. B. and K. C. B. following his name—decorations given him by England in addition to his own government's award of a privy counselorship. In addition, he has received decorations from the governments of China, Belgium, France and Italy.

Sir Arthur made a profound impression with his book, "Recovery, the Second Effort," published at the height of the economic depression in 1932. He again produced a thought-provoking book, "Security, Can We Retrieve It," in May, 1939, just as Great Britain, disillusioned with "appeasement" was arming to the teeth.

Elizabeth King Becomes Bride Of Comdr. D'Arc

The Grace Episcopal Church in Alexandria was the scene yesterday morning of the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Forrest King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Marshall of Alexandria, and Lieut. Comdr. Howard Thornton d'Arc, USN. He is the son of Mrs. Harry Thornton d'Arc and the late Dr. d'Arc of Glendale, Calif. The Rev. Leon Neff Naylor officiated.

The bridge, given in marriage by her father, wore a powder blue suit with small blue flower-trimmed hat and rose veil. Her corsage was of white rosebuds and baby's-breath. Miss Eleanor Bartlett, in a gold crepe dress, was matron of honor. Her corsage was of sweetheart roses.

Frank Marshall King, brother of the bride, was best man. A wedding breakfast at the home of the bride followed the ceremony. After a short wedding trip to New York, the bride will return to Hollins College, where she will complete her senior year.

Purely Personal News and Notes

Mrs. J. T. H. Mitchell, who with her daughter, Miss Ann Mitchell, spent the holidays in New York, has returned to Washington. She will leave this weekend, however, for an extended stay in Florida. Miss Mitchell plans to remain here for some time.

Mrs. Aspinwall To Take Part in War Bond Drive

In addition to her regular volunteer war work, there are two important events coming up on Mrs. Clarence Aspinwall's calendar.

One is the war bond drive which will open up this month in which Mrs. Aspinwall will take an active part through the women's division of the Treasury; the other is the annual meeting of the members of the Stratford Foundation held in January each year close to the date of General Robert E. Lee's birthday on January 19.

Mrs. Aspinwall's two sons, both in the service, managed to get home for Christmas.

Officers' Dance

In another of their dances for servicemen, the Officers' Club will entertain this evening at Gadsby's Tavern. The dance will be held from 9:30 to 12:30. Mrs. Llewellyn Powell is president of this organization, which sponsors dances for officers every two weeks.

Mrs. Warner Churchill returned to New York yesterday after spending several days here as the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Churchill Stoneborough. The latter entertained at a large party in honor of the visitor Tuesday afternoon.

Bolivian Envoy Recalled; Will Leave Next Week

After almost eight years as Bolivian envoy to Washington, Dr. Luis Fernando Guachalla, is returning to his country, his recall brought about by the recent change in the Bolivian government. He and Senora de Guachalla plan to leave the end of next week.

During Dr. Guachalla's tour of duty in the United States, he was raised from the rank of Minister to that of Ambassador. The Ambassador and Senora de Guachalla were the first occupants of the new embassy on Massachusetts ave. purchased by Bolivian government more than a year ago and decorated and furnished under the supervision of Senora de Guachalla.

One of the real beauties in the Diplomatic Corps, Chilean-born Senora de Guachalla, has made many friends during her stay here. A number of farewell parties—small and informal—have been planned to "speed the parting guests" on their way.

Allan-Mahan Troth Told

Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Allan of Chevy Chase, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Currier Allan, to Lieut. Richard D. Mahan, USNR, son of Mrs. Frank H. Mahan, Newtown Square, Pa.

Both Miss Allan and Lieutenant Mahan attended Pennsylvania State College, where she was a member of Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority and he is a member of Beta Theta Pi Fraternity.

Lieutenant Mahan has recently returned to the United States after a 20 months' tour of duty in the South Pacific including service as skipper of a PT boat.

Martin Plant Set for Billion Output Year

Baltimore, Jan. 5 (AP).—The Glenn L. Martin Aircraft Co. was set for the biggest production year in its history today with the announcement by the Navy Department that an order for 20 Mars-type flying boats had been placed.

The Mars is the 70-ton flying boat, largest plane of its type in the world, which was put into Navy cargo and transport service several months ago after several years of experimental and construction work.

Glenn L. Martin, president of the company bearing his name, announced soon after the Navy Department disclosure that the new contract meant his concern would produce approximately a billion dollars worth of planes this year. Some contracts adding to this total had not been disclosed, he added.

This figure compared, he said, with a total production value of 650 million dollars in 1943 and 337 million dollars in 1942.

To meet increased demands, between 5000 and 6000 additional workers would have to be hired between now and late spring, he said.

Martin said that he could not say when construction would being on the Mars-type ships, although the first is to be delivered in a year.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 5 (AP).—Grains responded to the setting of ceilings on hard wheat by staging a broad advance today, all deliveries of wheat and rye reaching new seasonal highs. May and July wheat were at peaks since 1928 and September was at its best level since 1917. Oats and barley were strong.

The action of the market was not unexpected. Many traders had felt that, once the maximums were announced, they would act as magnets in pulling wheat quotations higher. May wheat reached the ceiling of $1.71⅛, which applies for all deliveries here. Buying came from mills and houses with cash connections.

At the close wheat was 1⅜ to 1⅝ higher, May 1.71⅜@1.71¼. Oats were up 1¼, May 79⅝. Rye was ahead 1⅜ to 2⅛, May 1.30¼@1.30¼, and barley was ⅝ to 1½ higher, May 1.23⅛.

D. C. Theaters Get Their Bond Drives Under Way

By Marjorie Kelly.

Managers of Washington's moving picture theaters, determined to do their part in the film industry's campaign to "Sell a Bond for Every Seat," are already devising ways and means.

In order to achieve the industry's colossal objective, the sale of a bond for every seat in every theater in the Nation, nearly 12,500,000 individual bond sales will need to be made. The Treasury has called this program "the most ambitious bond-selling undertaken by any agency."

For the Fourth War Loan drive, the War Activities Committee of the industry has planned a national contest called "Honored Hundred," in which 100 outstanding managers in the United States will form the nucleus of a body to come to Washington and here confer with Secretary Morgenthau and help map out the film industry's campaign for the next war drive—the Fifth War Loan.

Local showmen will be trying for places among the "Honored Hundred," and also for $500 in "E" bonds which the Motion Picture Theater Owners of the District of Columbia will award to nine Washington managers who do an outstanding job on Fourth War Loan sales.

The local war activities committee and managers met yesterday to discuss plans such as bond premieres and free movie day, particulars of which will be announced later.

Meanwhile the Variety Club has an "Honored 500" of its own, or expects to. They'll be the Variety Club members who'll buy for a mere $1,000,000 down to $500 the privilege of being seated in the "Honored 500" section of the WRC-Variety Club Fourth War War Loan Bond Matinee at Uline's Arena January 29. Only Variety Club members will be permitted to buy seats in this section, emphasis elsewhere in the house being on selling as many as possible of the smaller denominations of bonds.

Meanwhile, a grim little ten-minute U. S. Army Signal Corps film, "Price of Rendova," reaches the screens of three downtown theaters today with an eloquent plea to keep on buying bonds and more bonds. "Price of Rendova" gives a pictorial record of a great and costly mission, showing battle scenes of the U. S. Marines storming the little island near the Japanese base at Munda in the Solomons. Loss of men and materiel in the capture is emphasized, in the plea that Americans continue bond buying.

The film is shown at the Loew's theaters beginning today, at Warner's Earle and the Metropolitan beginning tomorrow, and the Little, Pix and Trans-Lux beginning Saturday.

Late bulletin from the Sinatra front is that The Voice has the unique honor of being the only person, except for the President, privileged to nationally importune for donations to the 1944 March of Dimes. For Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, has appointed Sinatra chairman of the National Youth Division of the 1944 campaign. It seems safe to predict that the crooner will do a thorough job in enlisting the support of the millions of youngsters in the country for the drive.

We noted yesterday that "Jeannie" was going into its eighth week at the Little Theater, and indulged in a little "I-told-you-so" about that fact. The telephone rings just now, and it's Abe Tolkins of the Little, ready and willing to pay up on his bet that it wouldn't run so long, and adding a little information on just how successful "Jeannie" has been. In the seven weeks just concluded, "Jeannie" exceeded both in attendance and receipts the total for nine weeks of "The Baker's Wife" which set the previous record.

The demand for pin-ups, that peculiarly American manifestation of the highly personal and particular affection in which our public holds its entertainers, is not exclusively from the male branches of the service, it's been disclosed to us. Various uniformed femmes are deluging the movie studios with requests for shots of their hairy-chested heroes.

John Garfield, Warner's star, has stipulated that the still sent in answer to servicewomen's requests for his picture must be one from "Destination Tokyo" in which he is shown clutching a long-legged doll. The inscription is "Till the girls come home."

Hedda Hopper's Hollywood

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 5.—Johnny Farrow meant it when he said he'd hire returning servicemen who had been honorably discharged. The first one he took into "The Hitler Gang" was Norman Pabst, jr., who's been a marine 2½ years. Before that he was a member of the Screen Actors' guild . . . Ray Bolger, who spent six months in the South Seas, won't make a picture with Sol Lesser. He's back on Broadway for a new play. It's our loss . . . Gary Cooper (12 pounds thinner) and his gang back from the South Pacific, and, believe you me, that trip got Coop over all his shyness. He's all ready to go out again . . . Jimmy Cagney postponed his overseas jaunt. His mother's very ill . . . Nice shiny New Year for Ernst Lubitsch. He's well enough to continue working . . . Dorothy Lundgren of the golden voice, who made her radio debut on our Hollywood showcase, has had offers from three shows. She'll be on "What's New?" when that moves to New York January 15. They'll sure miss Don Ameche. He's a perfect M. C.

GARY COOPER

Doing the Job

The Army made a motion picture survey and discovered that one night recently 630,000 servicemen overseas saw our pictures free. The largest audience, 12,000, was in New Guinea; the smallest, 11, in Alaska . . . Henry Koster, who made so many Deanna Durbin hits, gets a change of pace when he directs "The Pirate" with Cary Grant and Charles Laughton and, we hope, Hedy Lamarr. It's a satire . . . At an opening recently, I chatted with a Canadian visitor, who was so surprised at fans asking stars for autographs. She said, "When Paul Muni was in Canada making a picture for 10 weeks he went through the back door to avoid crowds, but no one up there would have dreamed of speaking to him or invading his privacy."

Vox Pop

Helen Newman writes from St. Louis: "Best actress of year—Jean Arthur in 'The More the Merrier.' In that, Joel McCrea gave his first sign of having sex appeal. Alan Ladd won't wear well, same with Sinatra. How about more pictures with Claudette Colbert and Ray Milland in stories like 'Arise My Love' with Mitch Leisen directing? It's a mistake for Claudette Colbert to play a mother role. Hope they won't make a Claudia series. It would ruin Robert Young. A medal to Twentieth Century for 'Gay Nineties' and South American musicals. Please, some one deliver us from Mickey Rooney, also war propaganda films, religious films, morbid films, and pictures about sickness. 'Happy Go Lucky,' 'Lady Takes a Chance,' 'Slightly Dangerous,' all entertaining. And please—another Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers dancing picture."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

TERRENCE BURKE, editor of the Loyola College newspaper, came to Washington the other day and got an appointment to see the Vice President. He asked Mr. Wallace for a statement in the form of advice to the young men of this generation.

Wallace grinned and shook his head. "I haven't got anything to say. I never liked it when the old folks handed out advice, and I am not going to impose my advice on others."

The boy stared, puzzled. He had never found an adult unwilling to tell the young how to behave. There was a long pause. It looked as if the interview would fold up on the spot.

Presently Wallace resumed. "The only way for a young fellow to determine the right course is to search within himself. Advice imposed on him is no good. It has to spring from within."

Wallace had struck a theme close to his heart. He warmed up.

"A man came in here the other day and asked for the titles of the 10 books which had influenced me most. He was getting the same thing from a lot of people—the President, Mrs. Roosevelt, Churchill, Stalin and others. I didn't want to do it, because the books that have influenced me might not be the right books for others. I never like to prescribe for others.

"But I did name the Bible and Plato's "Republic." These two books are full of the idea of the dignity of the human soul, respect for the individual. They state it over and over again. The ancient Hebrews and the Greeks—the Bible and Plato. Both civilizations were based on the dignity of the individual human being."

Terrence Burke had expected to stay only five minutes. But the Vice President was talking so earnestly that it was obviously not the moment to go. He sat like the student at the feet of Gamaliel.

"The only way to develop your full strength is to reach out for something greater than yourself. That holds for a runner in a track meet, and it also holds for a politician or a business man. You have got to reach beyond your grasp, or wou will never explore your full capacities.

"This is in the Bible time and again. There are a lot of things in the Bible that fit conditions today—even inflation!"

Bible on Renegotiation

HERE WALLACE reached for his Bible and searched through it for the Book of Amos. "Amos was the oldest of all the prophets, and a real social revolutionary."

The Vice President started reading from the eighth chapter of Amos. "'Hear this, O ye that swallow up the needy, even to make the poor of the land to fail . . .'"

Wallace looked up. "Those are the profiteers," he said. "And listen to this. Amos is putting his finger on the people who don't want to renegotiate contracts.

"'When will the new moon be gone, that we may sell corn? And the Sabbath, that we may set forth wheat, making the ephah small and the shekel great.' That's inflation—and falsifying the balances by deceit."

The Vice President looked at his listener, with a twinkle behind his silver-rimmed glasses. Then he read another verse.

"'That we may buy the poor for silver, and the needy for a pair of shoes; yea, and sell the refuse of the wheat?'"

"But even this wasn't very popular in those days," continued the Vice President. "Amos was spurned and accursed, came to be the foundation stone of the Christian religion."

Atlantic Charter

"AND OVER HERE in the Book of Micah, Chapter 4, there's something about reconversion. 'And they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hook. Nations shall not lift up a sword against nations, neither shall they learn war any more.'

"Yes, Micah even has Rural Electrification, Farm Security, and the Atlantic Charter all wrapped up in Chapter 4. Listen to this: 'But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree; and none shall make them afraid.' (That's freedom from fear). 'For the mouth of the Lord of hosts has spoken it. For all people will walk every one in the name of his God.' (freedom of religion). 'And we will walk in the name of the Lord our God forever and ever.'"

Wallace turned back to the Book of Psalms. "I don't know whether it is faulty exegesis or not. Maybe it is finding a text to fit your own ideas. Anyhow, here's a passage that most people use to prove that Christ, who was a social revolutionary, and social revolutionaries are never popular. What's more, he belonged to the wrong kingdom. He was of the people of Judah, and he had gone up to Israel to do his preaching. And the Israelites didn't like it, so they told him to go home."

He had found Psalm 118 and he read verse 22: "'The stone which the builders refused is become the headstone of the corner.' But I see something else in that verse," he continued. "I see a reference to all the rejected peoples—the minorities all over the world. The rejected people grow strong. They work harder and hang together and get to be a dominant people.

"That's true of the Jews, and it may prove true of the Negroes and even the Japanese-Americans who are being spat upon today. Generally speaking, it is true of all rejected peoples. That's why there is so much hope for the minorities. We used to reject and despise the Chinese, but they may become 'the headstone of the corner.'

"That's something we will have to watch in making the peace," concluded the Vice President. "It must be a fair and generous peace, or the vanquished will become strong by the very fact of being oppressed."

The young man looked at the clock and realized he had been with the Vice President of the United States for half an hour. His head was swimming. Mr. Wallace had told him he had no advice for young people, but his listener's head was brimming with new ideas. He rose, grateful, and went away.

Notes and Anecdotes From Broadway

New York, Jan. 5.

Robert Porterfield, who owned and operated the famed Barter Theater, now is a private in the Air Force. He was assigned to accompany Corpl. George Montgomery, the movie actor, in an unusual experiment in Alaska. They lived in the glacier region as air force guinea pigs on whom were tested the types of food and clothing which might be required by fliers forced down in the Arctic . . . There, on an Alaskan glacier, they shivered for long days and longer nights . Porterfield, through chattering teeth, asked Montgomery: "What's the first thing you're going to do when you get back?" The frozen, blue-lipped actor replied: "I know now, but I won't tell you" . . . Porterfield just returned to New York and discovered that the first thing George Montgomery did when he returned from the frozen life on a glacier was to marry Dinah Shore.

RUTH GORDON

Corpl. Counsel Wilkinson, former dean of Fordham Law School, filed a 60-page brief in the departmental trial of Police Officer Drew—whose dismissal was asked on the ground that he was a Christian Fronter. The brief recommended Drew's dismissal, but it didn't prevail . . . George Britt of the OWI has been decorated with the Cross of Lebanon . . . Two playwright-producers may buy the Hudson Theater . . . The Army-made movie, "Battle of Russia," is up for the Stalin Prize, Moscow's highest state award . . . Lillian Hellman, who is under contract to write one more movie for Sam Goldwyn, is buying her release from him.

At the Music Box, Ruth Gordon will star in her own play, "Over Twenty-one." One of the scenes shows Miss Gordon dialing a phone number, and then saying "Hello? Felix?" . . . Felix, of course, is Supreme Court Justice Frankfurter, an old friend of Miss Gordon's. He attended her wedding to Lieut. Garson Kanin, the film director. They asked him to perform the ceremony. He told them that while thousands of less important judges are empowered to do so, no Supreme Court Justice may perform a marriage. We have no jurisdiction," ruled Mr. Justice Frankfurter. "Marriage, it seems, is not a Federal offense."

Before Col. Ovetta Hobby, head of the WACS, started wearing her uniform at all times, she attended a formal dinner party at the Mayflower in Washington. Colonel Hobby wore a dinner gown . . . En route they met many officers, and the general returned their salutes. Mrs. Hobby then whispered to him: "Is anything wrong with my gown? Maybe I'm becoming self-conscious, but I think all those officers were staring at me" . . . "Yes, they were staring at you," the general told her. "It's not that anything is wrong with your lovely gown. It's just that you kept returning their salutes."

Tallulah Bankhead and Estelle Winwood addressed a women's club luncheon. Miss Winwood heard a lady in the audience say, about the actress guests of honor: "They seem rather nice." Miss Winwood told the lady: "We are no more 'they' than you are." . . . Dave Niles of the White House staff has purchased a farm in New Hampshire . . . Ludwig Bemelmans, who has been saying unpleasant things about an MGM producer, finally met him at the studio and received a cold reception. This bothered Bemelmans, who phoned the producer and said: "Look. There's a rumor around that I dislike you. I hate rumors. So I'm calling to confirm it."

Joe Alsop, the Washington columnist who is related to the President and who was interned by the Japs, now is back in China working for Lend-Lease. Alsop is doing an excellent job. He has been sending regular reports by wireless to T. V. Soong in Washington. Because Alsop also is an able newspaperman, these reports include lengthy dissertations on the economic and philosophic changes taking place in the Orient . . . Soong received a sheaf of these wireless reports and suggested that henceforth Alsop make them brief . . . Alsop thereupon sent him an indignant reply: "If I can't be garrulous, I'd rather be silent."

Toscanini's guests on New Year's Eve spent the night playing Songs of Democracy. After the Maestro's son-in-law, Horowitz, finished one of the songs, Toscanini's 9-year-old granddaughter shouted: "Encore—whatever that means" . . . Because of the sell-out business they did last week end, Larry Adler and Paul Draper will return to the new City Center the week of January 24 . . . The Affiliated Young Democrats may follow suit and call themselves the Affiliated Young Win-the-War Party . . . One of the railroad presidents who was commissioned a colonel when the Army took over the railroads, isn't buying a uniform yet. He's 78, and wants to wait until he's sure that he can pass the Army physical.

Friday afternoon a young lady came to the box office of the Moresco, where "Voice of the Turtle" is playing, and asked: "Could I possibly get two tickets for last Thursday's performance?" . . . "Don't you mean next Thursday?" asked the box-office man . . . "No, I mean last Thursday," the lady insisted . . . The porter, cleaning the theater, finally found two ticket-stubs for the Thursday performance . . . "Here they are, lady," said the box office man. "But tell me—why do you want them?" . . . "Well," she confessed, "I told my husband, who is a suspicious man, that I went to see this show on Thursday night—and he demands proof."

DONALD DUCK — By Walt Disney

Copr., 1944, Walt Disney Productions—World Rights Reserved.

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

THE KIDS IN OUR ROOM ARE HAVING A DANCE!
AND IT'S GOING TO BE FORMAL!
DID YOU SAY FORMAL?
YEH! THE GIRLS PUT ON LIPSTICK!
AND THE BOYS WEAR NECKTIES!
YOU CAN DO AS YOU PLEASE ABOUT YOUR LIPSTICK, BUT SAMPSON IS NOT GOING TO WEAR ANY OF MY TIES!

JOE PALOOKA — The News Spreads — By Ham Fisher

HEY— HEAR TH' NEWS? A GRUDGE FIGHT TONIGHT AT THE SMOKER.
NO KIDDIN'.
OH BEBY! THAT'LL TOP OFF THE OTHER MATCHES.
YEAH— JERRY LEEMY AND A SAILOR. PALOOKA STOPPED 'EM FROM GOIN' AT IT ON DECK.
CAN EITHER OF 'EM FIGHT, OR IS IT JUST A SLUG-FEST?
WELL, I HEAR THE SAILOR IS AWFUL HANDY. HE BOXED SEVERAL AMATEUR BOUTS.
I DON'T THINK LEEMY EVER BOXED. MAYBE THE SAILOR'LL KNOCK SOME OF THE COCKINESS OUT OF 'IM.
NOBUDDY'S IN HERE. C'MON IN. I WANT A GO OVER SOMETHIN' WIT 'IM.
OKAY.

JANE ARDEN — Jane Gets a Call — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

OH-OH- SOME TELL-TALE FEATHERS! WHILE I'M PICKING THEM UP, YOU PHONE JANE ARDEN— REMEMBER YOUR LINES!
LEAVE IT TO ME— I'LL PUT IT OVER!
CALBUR WRUNG A CHICKEN'S NECK TO LEAVE BLOOD-STAINS IN WANDA'S ROOM—
HELLO, MISS ARDEN? SOMETHING TERRIBLE HAS HAPPENED— I MUST SEE YOU AT ONCE— IT'S A MATTER OF LIFE OR DEATH!
HELLO— HELLO— SHE'S CUT OFF— I'D BETTER GO SEE WHAT THIS IS ABOUT COME ON— IT'S TIME FOR US TO GET OUT OF HERE!
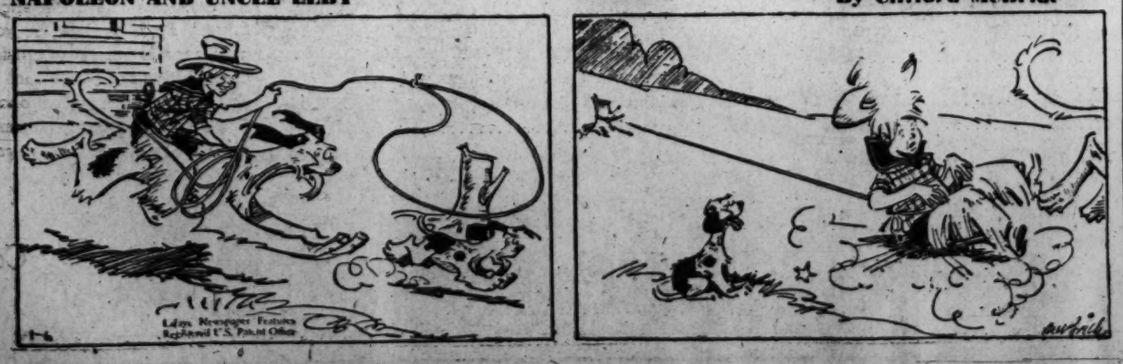
I CAN HARDLY WAIT TO READ HER STORY!

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

HERE I AM AGAIN! ALL'S QUIET, UNCLE SUPERMAN! NOBODY HYSTERICAL, OR ANYTHING...
GOOD!
THEN WE MIGHT AS WELL FIND OUT WHAT MAKES THESE ELEVATORS KEEP GOING UP!
DO YOU SEE WHAT I SEE?
I CAN'T BELIEVE IT!
THE MAN IN THE MOON!

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — By Clifford McBride



TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Joker Among Aces — By Milton Caniff

HONEST! DICK PROUTY CAUGHT THE ASSIGNMENT— HE HAD TO PUT GRETT MURMUR UNDER HOUSE ARREST— A JAP CODE TURNED UP IN HER WASTE BASKET!
NOT GRETT!
LUVVA PETE!
IT WAS OBVIOUS THAT WE HAD A SPY HERE AFTER WE LOST TWO BOMBERS ON THAT PHONY MISSION— BUT GRETT MURMUR— OF ALL PEOPLE!
TAKE IT EASY— A JAP CODE IN HER WASTE BASKET IS PRETTY FLIMSY EVIDENCE!
SOMEBODY ELSE COULD HAVE PUT IT THERE! WHO'S BEEN TO VISIT GRETT SINCE SHE LEFT THE HOSPITAL?
WHO HASN'T?
POSEY'S RIGHT... EVERYBODY ON THE POST HAS BEEN THERE AT ONE TIME OR ANOTHER!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

I'VE GOT GREAT NEWS FOR YOU, DARLIN'!.. MOM WANTS YOU TO COME TO DINNER TOMORROW!
OH...! THE OFFICIAL ONCE-OVER, HUH? I'VE BEEN DREADIN' THAT!
GOSH, GYPSY! ..I THOUGHT YOU'D BE GLAD!
YOU WOULDN'T UNDERSTAND, JUNIOR!.. YOU NEVER WENT THROUGH THE AGONY OF BREAKIN' IN AN ACT, KNOWIN' THERE ARE SCOUTS IN THE HOUSE, SITTIN' ON THEIR HANDS AN' DARIN' YOU TO MAKE GOOD!
BUT THIS IS THE TRY-OUT FOR THE BEST BOOKING OF MY LIFE, AN' I'LL GIVE IT ALL I'VE GOT! WISH ME LUCK.. AN' PRAY THAT I DON'T MUFF ANY CUES, BUD!

MICKEY FINN — Superman — By Lank Leonard

IS THIS THE MAN?
YES SIR!
WE THOUGHT YOU'D WANT US TO BRING IT TO YOUR ATTENTION, SIR!
HMMM! I'M GLAD YOU DID!
W-WHAT IS IT, D-DOC? A-AM- -I-
YOU ARE TO BE CONGRATULATED, SIR! FOR A MAN OF YOUR YEARS, YOU ARE THE MOST MARVELOUS PHYSICAL SPECIMEN WE HAVE EVER EXAMINED!
IT'S JUST NERVES! HE'LL BE OKAY IN A MINUTE!

MR. AND MRS. — No Romance, Merely Convenience — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

DO YOU MIND IF I TAKE YOUR ARM?
WHY, NO. SURE, NOT
LOTS OF ARM-IN-ARM FOLKS THESE DAYS
YOU ALL RIGHT?
YES, THANKS
SEEMS LIKE OLD TIMES, YES, GOING ARM-IN-ARM
THE SIDEWALK IS SO SLIPPERY I WAS AFRAID I'D FALL

DIXIE DUGAN — Swapping — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

MR. SMITH AND I ARE UNITED IN A BUSINESS WAY—
THAT'S A RELIEF!
BUT THANK YOU, MY DEAR, FOR THINKING I HAD OTHER POSSIBILITIES— (AHEM)
MR. SMITH AND I ARE SWAPPING! I'M TAKING OVER HIS 1,000-ACRE FARM FOR THIS PLACE AND $10,000 CASH.
HAVE YOU SEEN HIS FARM?
YES— IT'S A PERFECTLY BEAUTIFUL PLACE, NOT TOO FAR FROM HERE— WE PASSED BY IT ON A BUS LAST SATURDAY
?!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Saved Again — By Frank Martinek

GOD MUST HAVE BEEN WITH ME AS THE FISH DISAPPEARED AND I DIDN'T SEE THEM AGAIN
AFTER SIX DAYS AT SEA I DRIFTED INTO ENEMY WATERS AND SAW THE FIRST OF MANY JAPANESE PLANES I WAS TO SEE HOPE THOSE JAPS DON'T SEE ME!
AS TIME PASSED I SAW ONE OR MORE ENEMY AND FRIENDLY PLANES A DAY. I SIGNALED TO THEM WITH TRACER AMMUNITION AND FLASHED MY MIRROR
IT'S NO USE. NO ONE SEES ME!
DAYS PASSED AND ON JULY 20TH, A HUGE WAVE THREW THE RAFT END OVER END IN SHARK-INFESTED WATERS
LUCKY I HAVE LASHED MY EQUIPMENT AND MYSELF TO THE RAFT!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Woggon

ACH, YES! BIND WELL HIS ARMS! IT WILL SIMPLIFY THE WORK OF THE FIRING SQUAD!
QUEL BÊTISE! MY ANCIENT FINGERS ARE SO CLUMSY!
BUT THERE IS NO CLUMSINESS IN THE GNARLED HAND WHICH CLOSES IN A FLASH OVER THE HEAVY WOODEN SHOE!

WINNIE WINKLE — No Slack Business — By Branner

TH' BOSS SEEMS TO BE SORE AT ME! IS IT 'CAUSE I WAS KNITTIN' IN TH' OFFICE?
NO! THAT'S PATRIOTIC WORK!
I KNOW! HE'S JES' PEEVED AT HAVIN' AN OFFICE GIRL INSTEAD OF A BOY!!
WELL, THAT MAY BE PARTLY TRUE, DAISY!
I GOT IT FIXED SO'S TH' BOSS'LL HARDLY NOTICE TH' DIFFERENCE!
OH, THAT'S MR. BIBBS BUZZING FOR YOU, NOW---
OKAY, BOSS! WHAT'S ON YER MIND?
YE GODS! AM I SEEING THINGS ?!!!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED — By Zane Grey

WELL, DR. GAMMA, THERE'S PROFESSOR ZERO, DRIVING HIS BURRO! WHAT DO YOU HAVE TO SAY NOW?
THEN HE-HE COULDN'T HAVE ROBBED THAT TRAIN! BUT-BUT, KING, I'M NOT THE 'GLOWING GHOST'!
IT MUST BE SOMEONE ELSE!
HEY ZERO! STOP THAT WAGON!
COME ON, DOCTOR! ONE OF YOU IS THE 'GHOST' AND WE'RE HAVING A SHOW-DOWN RIGHT NOW!

Mrs. Ada McC. Aitchison

Mrs. Ada McCown Aitchison, 57, of 1929 S st. nw., wife of Interstate Commerce Commissioner Clyde B. Aitchison, died yesterday morning at the Washington Sanitarium and Hospital, Takoma Park, after an illness of several months.

A descendant of pioneers, Mrs. Aitchison was born in Oregon. Prior to her marriage to Commissioner Aitchison in Portland, Oreg., in September, 1936, she was research assistant in the legislative reference service division of the Library of Congress, specializing in money and banking problems.

She leaves her husband and two step-children, Dr. Beatrice Aitchison and Maj. Bruce Aitchison, USA. Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. at the Church of Epiphany, with the Rev. A. J. Wilder officiating. Interment will be at Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Joseph W. Gibson

Funeral services for Joseph W. Gibson, 55, of 1340 Fairmont st. nw., who died Tuesday night in his country home at Hooes Postoffice (Va.), will be held in Hines Funeral Home at 1 p. m. Saturday. Interment will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Born in Lower Marlboro, Va., Gibson for the past 20 years was a special agent for the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company in Washington. He was a member of the Stansbury Masonic Lodge.

Surviving are his wife, two sisters and two brothers, one of the latter, William C. Gibson, a former manger of Hahn's shoe stores here.

John S. Alexander, Jr.

Funeral services for John S. Alexander, jr., 53, resident of Silver Spring, Md., for 25 years who died Tuesday after a short illness, will be held today at 11 a. m. at his home, 8400 Dixon ave. Burial wil be in Congresisonal Cemetery.

A native of Washington, he was an employe of Thompson's dairy for 29 years. Besides his wife, Mrs. Annie B. Alexander, he leaves a daughter, Betty Ann Alexander, a brother, Theodore W. Alexander of Washington, and two sisters, Mrs. Theresa Hestikind and Mrs. Mary N. Ackerman, both of Florida.

Miss Cora C. Curry

Funeral services for Miss Cora C. Curry, 91, librarian of the National Genealogical Association, will be held at her home 1420 Girard st. nw., today at 8:30 p.m. Interment will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Surviving are three sisters, Misses Kate, Minnie, and Ida Curry, of the same address.

Arthur S. Lord

Funeral services for Arthur S. Lord, 42, of 1219 Decatur st. nw., will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow from Hines funeral home. Interment will be at Cedar Hill Cemetery. Mr. Lord died Tuesday morning after a heart attack.

A native of Cricket Hill, Va., he lived in Washington most of his life. He was a member of the Board of Trade, the Home Builders Association and the Touch-Down Club. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Katherine Lord, Arthur C., jr., 4, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lord; also two brothers, Howard and Carter Lord of Washington.
